MR. HEARST ANSWERS 10 QUESTIONS ON MEXICO TO BERLIN NEWSPAPER

"Monroe Doctrine in Danger as Result of U. S. Policy," He Declares. No Faction Strong Enough to Govern Mexico Now Without U. S. Aid.

"NO FACTION, UNAIDED BY U. S., CAN RESTORE TRANQUILLITY."

Special Cable to Boston American.

BERLIN, June 11.—The Vossische Zeitung, the oldest and one of the foremost newspapers of Berlin, publishes this morning a three-column interview with William Randolph Hearst on the Mexican situation, cabled from New York City.

The Vossische Zeitung asked the Berlin correspondent of Hearst's New York German Journal, Mr. Fritz Jacobsohn, now in New York, to interview Mr. Hearst. Ten questions were asked:

The questions and answers follow:

Q. 1. Germany is interested in a stable form of government in Mexico. German sentiment seems to be of opinion it would be more simple and less costly to recognize Huerta as the ruling power. Germans cannot understand why the United States government has persistently refused to recognize Huerta. What are the real reasons for this refusal?

A. It is very difficult to find any real reason for the policy of the United States government in regard to Mexico. Its policy does not seem to be based on reason. The friends of the Administration would probably say that its policy was guided by sentiment; the critics of the Administration would substitute pique, or prejudice, or impulse for sentiment. If there is any reason in the policy of the Administration, it is probably the realization that Huerta does not represent the whole Mexican people, but only a faction. Of course, this is true enough, but it is practically impossible to find any one in Mexico at this time who does represent the whole Mexican people, and who does not represent either one faction or another.

Q. 2. Do you think Mexico would be pacified by this time had Huerta been recognized by the United States?

A. I do not think that Mexico would be pacified by this time if Huerta had been recognized by the United States. The Madero murder and other outrages of this character have so aggravated the hostility between the Federalists and the Constitutionalists that in my estimation any union will be impossible under the administration of any man responsible for such outrages. In fact, the situation has become so intricate and so intense that I do not see how peace can permanently be established under the rule of any one conspicuously representing any of the contending factions. It is for that reason that I have advocated intervention by the United States. The United States is strong enough to compel peace and enforce order. The United States is not, or ought not to be a partisan of any one of the factions. It could deal justly with both factions, and should settle all questions according to the accepted rules and standards of civilized government everywhere.

Q. 3. Are the Mexicans far enough advanced to govern themselves? Is a democratic form of government possible in Mexico today?

A. I think that the Mexicans are far enough advanced to govern themselves under ordinary conditions, but not far enough advanced to give themselves as good a government as the United States could give them. The phrase, "a democratic form of government," is merely a relative term. The more intelligent people become, the nearer they can approach to an absolute democracy. We think that we have an absolute democracy here in the United States, but we have not. We have an autocracy of wealth, modified by semi-democratic institutions and by spasmodic manifestations of popular sentiment. Such a government is plainly susceptible to improvement and is constantly being improved and constantly being made more democratic. Withal, it is the nearest

RANGER, DISABLED, RETURNS

The Massachusetts nautical schoolship Ranger, which left Boston three weeks ago on a 10,000-mile trip, put back into port today with her engines out of commission.

Captain Charles N. Atwater said serious engine trouble developed on May 25, when the ship was 900 miles east of Boston, and that three days later he had to turn back.

The Ranger had to use her sails as her engines were capable of but one-third their normal speed. Because of unfavorable winds the vessel had to cover 1,800 miles on its return trip. The ship will be repaired at the Charlestown Navy Yard and in three weeks will probably resume its journey. There were 103 cadets aboard, all of whom were disappointed by the accident.

Police Demand That Summer Suit Now

The Boston police—the common or garden patrolmen who have to swelter on the street corners in their long blue overcoats these days—are about ready to mutiny. They say Commissioner O'Meara is delaying beyond all reason the order to don Summer uniforms and white helmets. Some say the usual date is May 30. Headquarters explains, however, that June 14 is the earliest, and July 1 about the usual thing. The Boston Social Club, a police organization, is to send a delegation to the commissioner to beg for Summer uniforms.

NEW YORK, June 11.—"And now it is all over, Madame Schumann-Heink is a free woman and I am dishonored. Every man who reads of the Chicago travesty thinks of me so. There are some women who understand and they think of me with charity in their hearts because they, too, have suffered.

"But the vast majority of my sex view me with disdain—see in me a siren or an adventuress, a love pirate or even a painted woman. It is not remarkable at all because that is the rule of society. Thus have I been painted and written. The Illinois Court would not permit me to defend myself, so only one side of the picture was shown."

The three deaths and four prostrations so far reported occurred on the opening day of the hot wave. They were:

DEATHS.

FLEMMING, JOHN W., sixty-nine years, 3 Market street, Brighton, found dead in bed.

THAYER, JAMES, eighty-three years, of Natick, stricken on Dover street bridge over Charles River, fell in and was drowned.

SORENSON, JOHN, forty-seven years, 176 Blue Hill avenue, died at City Hospital from effect of stroke in previous hot wave.

PROSTRATIONS.

COYNE, DANIEL, twenty-nine years, 125 Chelsea street, Everett.

DRISCOLL, JAMES, thirty-five years, 1 Dollar place.

FLETCHER, LOUIS, twenty-four years, Beverly.

WILLIAMS, JAMES H., sixty-six years, 68 Waltham st.

. . . .

More deaths and prostrations in Boston and New England were feared today from the heat wave.

Three deaths and four prostrations have been caused so far, with today starting in hotter than the day before.

The noon temperature today was from fourteen to fifteen degrees warmer than at the same time yesterday.

The official temperature in Boston at 11 a. m. was 87 degrees, but down on the sun-baked sidewalks, where people had to move about, the temperature was more like an oven. A sample of the sidewalk heat was found at 8 o'clock, when a Summer street thermometer registered 93 in the sun. The official temperature at that hour, taken on top of the post-office building, was 76.

Boston was one of the warmest of the big cities today. At 8 o'clock, when Boston was 76, the official readings from other cities were: Chicago 70, St. Louis 84, San Francisco 50, Washington 78, New York 74, Denver 58, Los Angeles 56, New Orleans 80.

The Weather Man said this noon that tonight would be "very hot and it will be very hot tomorrow."

He said this after he had given out the official forecast, as follows:

"For Boston and vicinity: Fair tonight. Friday probably fair. Moderate west winds becoming variable."

The forecast itself didn't tell anything about heat, but the man-behind-the-forecast admitted that the heat wave would hold over tomorrow, from all present indications.

Warned by yesterday's quick-rising temperature, Greater Boston was prepared today to be wilted. The lightest of clothing was in order. Crackers and milk made a popular lunch. The soda fountain clerk had to make his hands work faster than the eye could follow, and still he never caught up with his trade.

Keep Roosevelt's Plans Quiet for Fear of Militants

LONDON, June 11.—Fears of suffragette activities have caused the withholding from publication in London of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's engagements during his approaching visit to England.

It is known, however, that except for his lecture before the Royal Geographical Society, Colonel Roosevelt, at his own request, will take no part in public functions while he is in London.

On the other hand, an extensive list of private entertainments has been arranged, so that he Colonel may have the opportunity of meeting prominent people whom he most desires to see.

Mrs. Bud Fisher's Condition Serious

NEW YORK, June 11.—Physicians at Fordham Hospital today held out little hope for the recovery of Mrs. Bud Fisher, wife of the famous cartoonist who created "Mutt and Jeff," who, with five other persons, were injured in an automobile accident early today. Mrs. Fisher with a party of friends was riding in a large touring car when it collided with a small run-about on Pelham Parkway. Mrs. Fisher suffered a crushed chest, internal injuries and other injuries. Before her marriage Mrs. Fisher was Miss Pauline Welch, a vaudeville actress.

Adlai Stevenson Is Nearing Death

CHICAGO, June 11.—Adlai E. Stevenson, former Vice-President of the United States, who is ill here, was gradually sinking today and his death was expected before night. Physicians declare his splendid vitality alone kept him alive. Members of his family are at his bedside.

Asquith Offers Chance to Ulster

LONDON, June 11.—Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons today that if the opposition desired to amend the home rule bill the amendment would be introduced in the House of Lords before the main bill was taken up. No date has yet been fixed for taking up the bill.

Receiver for Big Straw Board Plant

NORWICH, Ct., June 11.—In the Superior Court here today Maunsell van Rensselaer was appointed by Judge Shumway as temporary receiver for the Thames River Specialties Company, which operate a $1,000,000 plant at Montville, manufacturing a high grade of strawboard.

ANTILLA DOCKS AT TAMPICO

ON BOARD THE U. S. S. CALIFORNIA, Mazatlan, Mex., June 10.— (via wireless to San Diego, Cal., June 11.)—Heavy volley firing on the outskirts of Mazatlan was heard tonight. It is believed the Constitutionalists are advancing for a determined assault. A well-directed attack, it is thought, would result in capture. The Constitutionalists captured strategic hill north of the city Tuesday night.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The Ward liner Antilla, with her cargo of 3,000,000 rounds of ammunition, an aeroplane and other munitions of war for the Constitutionalists, today docked at Tampico, according to private advices received at Constitutionalist headquarters in this city.

Constitutionalists here say the liner was flying the Cuban flag during her trip from the United States and when she docked at Tampico.

The dispatch, which was brief, did not state whether the work of unloading the cargo was begun.

The administration leaders were stirred today by a cablegram from Brigadier-General Funston at Vera Cruz, stating that Mexican troops are concentrating along his lines. He did not ask for reinforcements, but said he thought that with his troops and the marines and bluejackets now on the fleet at Vera Cruz he would be able to maintain his position.

A stupid attempt was made to conceal the news from Vera Cruz.

In the opinion of the war officials Funston's message was an indirect bid for reinforcements. These officials are satisfied such a message would not come from an officer of Funston's experience and known courage without serious facts back of it.

The most embarrassing part of the news is that Funston is apparently unable to estimate the strength of the Mexican reinforcements in front of his lines showing with what secrecy the Mexicans are moving. The fact that they are moving secretly demonstrates that they are also moving effectively.

CELITA BEGS WIFE TO RETURN

Where is Mrs. Sabino Celita of No. 12 Thatcher court, North End?

Her husband wants to know. So does her mother. Also the police.

Mrs. Celita disappeared from her home at 7:30 a. m. on May 26.

Her maiden name was Angelina Maffa. Her acquaintances—and they are many — are dumfounded at her continued absence.

In the North End—in stores, cafes and dwellings—Mrs. Celita's disappearance is the one topic of conversation.

In the vicinity of Thatcher, North Margin and Endicott street, Sabino Celita, the husband, walks up and down asking everybody if they have seen her and inquiring if anybody knows two men who called and offered her work on the morning of May 26.

Last Tuesday he and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Maria Maffa, visited Police Headquarters and told in the best English they could muster how Angelina was mysteriously coaxed from her home, under an excuse of giving her work.

On that day Celita himself visited the corridors of the court house. To reporters, police and to all else whom he could find to listen, he, with tears in his eyes, repeated his pitiable story, saying:

HUSBAND MAKES APPEAL.

"On May 26—morning—half pasta 7—two men come to my house—tell my wife they got something for her to do—some work—she dress for the street—she meet men—she walk off—they linger—I no see her since."

To an AMERICAN reporter he, through an interpreter, gave the following pathetic appeal to his wife to come home to him. It is written in Italian, as follows:

> Cara Moglia — Ter piacere retirete a mia cara tutte le questione sono ferrite io non grosso stare senza ji te se non ti veoto per il presto io moriro.
>
> (Signed) SABINO CELITA.

When the reporter today visited the home of Mrs. Celita's mother at No. 12 Thatcher street he found neighbors crowded about her. Ernest Ardolino of No. 59 North Margin street acted as interpreter.

"My daughter is a good woman," said Mrs. Maffa. "Her husband owns property on Belmont street, Charlestown. He loves her dearly. I cannot account for her absence. She was always a home-loving woman.

"Two men called at the house and told Angelina, my daughter, that they had some work for her. One of the men said that he would pay her $9 a week for whatever labor she was to perform. I was nearby and heard what they said.

"Later Angelina left the men and came up stairs. I went with her. She made two white aprons two days before. She took these aprons with her when she left the house. She was dressed in street attire.

MOTHER CANNOT SLEEP.

"Before going Angelina told me that I would hear from her. She did not say when. That is what's worrying me. I am fretting night and day. I am sore at heart. I cannot sleep nights thinking of her.

"If any friend reads this in the AMERICAN I hope they will tell Angelina that I am craving for sight of her. I would like them to plead with her to let me know where she is.

"Angelina was always good to me. She always called me 'mama.' Somebody must be restraining her against her will. If that is not so she would write.

"I do not know who the two men were who called to see her. They were well dressed.

"My daughter wore a green silk dress with white dots. The dress was full length and fitted her snugly. Her shoes were dark. So were her stockings. Her hat was dark, and had two black feathers on it. Three dark red roses were pinned on the side.

"She is about five feet six inches, robust, black hair, dark eyes and has perfect teeth. Her hair is jet black. She is thirty-two years old.

"If Angelina only knew what anguish she is causing me and her husband she would not delay communicating with either of us. We hope she will come home. We are praying that no harm has befallen her, and that she has not fallen in with people who may be detaining her against her will."

ATTORNEY JOINS HUNT.

Attorney John J. Cronin has been retained by Celita. He said today:

"Sabino is nearly crazed from grief. It appears to me, judging by what Sabino says, that the men told his wife her cup of happiness would be filled to the brim were she to accept their offer of work.

"There is no doubt in my mind but what the woman is being detained somewhere. I have men watching certain sections and once they lay eyes on her I shall get in touch with her."

Sabino Celita said to an AMERICAN reporter today:

"I cannot eat or sleep. I'm restless I lie in bed. Then I get up. Then I sit down. Then I walk out in the street. I get lonesome. I meet people. I tell them my troubles. Some shrug their shoulders. Some nod their heads, this way and that, and say 'Poor Sabino!'

"Yes, Poor Sabino. That is what I am. Why does she stay away from me. Perhaps she is crying for my assistance. I think that way.

"These are some of the thoughts which crowd my mind as I walk in the street. Then I go back to my room. I smoke till I'm tired. Then I give way to crying. If she only knew how I love her!"

HAVE YOU SEEN THIS WOMAN?

Mrs. Sabino Celita is thirty-two years old, five feet six inches, weighs about 160 pounds, dark complexioned, dark snappy eyes, milk white teeth, dark hair, red cheeks, and rather robust. She wore a dark green dress with white dots, black hat with two black feathers and three dark red roses, and a wedding ring.

ASK FOR POLICE IN NEW STRIKE AT WAKEFIELD

In expectation of trouble at the Heywood Brothers Wakefield Rattan Factory in Wakefield today, the Wakefield police asked Lynn, Somerville and Melrose to send all officers who could be spared to help the Wakefield authorities meet the situation.

The strike at the rattan factory—"settled" a few days ago—broke out again when about 400 A. F. of L. workers walked out with new grievances. It was expected the I. W. W. would leave the factory today, and the police anticipated some disturbance in urging other workers to leave.

Chief Burckes of Lynn refused to send any officers, as the sending of Lynn policemen to Lawrence during the big strike there was made an issue in the municipal campaign by the labor element. From Somerville, however, twelve officers were sent, under command of Acting Sergeant John A. Ray.

Brookline Is Now Using a Fly Trap

The latest development in the fly and mosquito campaign being waged in Brookline is the purchase of 100 fly and mosquito traps to be used in the business and tenement districts. The traps were invented by J. Albert C. Nyhen, a Brookline man. The town used ten of these traps last year to great advantage. Mr. Nyhen is the director of the mosquito and fly suppression movement in the town. The Board of Health have approved of the trap.

WAGE INCREASE FOR TRAINMEN IS REPORTED

The wage controversy between the trainmen and the managements of the Boston & Maine, New Haven, Boston & Albany and Maine Central railroads has been settled, according to an unconfirmed report current today among railroad men.

Under this agreement, which is to date back to October 1, 1913, substantial increases in wages have been given the trainmen, and runs have been shortened. The substance of the agreement, according to the report is as follows:

Conductors have been granted an increase of thirty cents a day and three cents an hour for overtime, making 45 cents an hour for all overtime work.

Rear brakemen, or flagmen, have been given an increase of five cents a day, making their wage $2.60 for ten hours' work or less. They will also receive 26 cents an hour for all overtime work, an increase of one cent.

Middle brakemen, though their wages have not been increased, have had their mileage reduced.

Baggagemasters will receive the same pay, but their mileage has been reduced.

Hereafter 155 miles will constitute a day's work for conductors, 166 miles for baggagemasters and 159 miles for brakemen.

All trainmen will be paid overtime for actual time worked. In the past if a man worked twenty-nines minutes overtime he got nothing; thirty-one minutes, he got an hour.

At the offices of the Boston & Maine no official statement could be secured verifying the increases.

GROOM, 62, LAYS HEART SUIT TO JOKE LAST YEAR

Colonel Charles C. Jones, soldier of fortune and scout under General Custer, who has been sued in $25,000 for alleged breach of promise by Mrs. Mary Meehan, declared to a reporter today:

"I met Mrs. Meehan at a party last Summer. She dared me to marry her and I took up the dare as a joke. We went to the city clerk's office and filed an application for a marriage license. But I had no intention of taking out a license.

"I supposed the affair closed until I learned the other day that she intended to bring suit."

Colonel Jones is sixty-two. He returned to Boston a year ago last May, as a claimant to a portion of the $40,000 estate left by his mother, Manuella Jones of Jamaica Plain. During his forty years' absence he was declared legally dead by the courts of Suffolk county.

He was married in January to Helena Abbot Bradley, a Back Bay widow, and for the last few months they have lived at No. 36 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge.

Colonel Jones fought in the Boer war, enlisting in the English army when he was engaged as a mining engineer in South Africa. Later he went prospecting in Japan and fought with the Japanese against Russia. While in China he took part in the Chinese rebellion.

Shortly after Admiral Dewey's victory at Manila, Colonel Jones offered his services, which were accepted, to the United States government. He organized a detachment of native scouts which did effective work in the Philippines.

Report on Morgan Books to End Probe

WASHINGTON, June 11.—That the Interstate Commerce Commission investigation into the financial affairs of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad probably will wind up following a report from the commissions examiners who now are in New York city inspecting the books of J. P. Morgan & Co., was the statement of Chief Counsel Folk of the commission today. He would say nothing regarding the state of the commission's negotiations with William Rockefeller, George McCullough Miller, Laurence Minot of Boston and George F. Baker relative to testimony, nor would he express an opinion as to what course the Department of Justice will pursue with regard to the New Haven directors.

Misses Train, but Beats It with Auto

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 11.—Charles C. Carter of Rye Beach, when he found that the train for Boston which he wanted to catch at the Rye Beach station had just gone before his arrival, jumped into a waiting automobile and raced the train four miles to Hampton, the next station, arriving there one minute before the train. He was waiting on the platform as it pulled in.

B. & M. Returns to Old Train Numbers

Mexico and War Pictures by Exile

Mexico and the War, as shown by the film, is drawing good audiences to Tremont Temple every afternoon and evening this week. Count De Basa, the lecturer, himself an exile, and the confidential friend of the late President Madero, makes a fine impression. He shows more than 7,000 feet of film portraying Huerta, Villa and his troops at Torreon, the U. S. A. in Vera Cruz and other timely matters. The lecture is interesting and instructive. Count De Basa gives a clear insight into Mexico's troubles and the problem of America in that fiery country.

AGAIN SENT TO PRISON, TELLS 'WAGES OF SIN'

A country boy who went wrong told his sorrowful story today in the grim and pitiless courtroom at East Cambridge. He was William T. Reid, whom the law calls "a common and notorious thief," and he was sentenced—after his story was done—to three to four years in State's prison.

Judge Keating was profoundly moved by Reid's story. Reid made no plea for mercy.

"I just want to tell you, Your Honor, what my life has been," was his introduction.

While he spoke you could have heard a pin drop in the big courtroom. The half dozen lawyers, the court officers, the clerk and judge—even the few curious spectators behind the rail—sat with downcast eyes, and Reid's voice spoke on and on.

He spoke firmly, clearly—save once when he told how after ten weary years in prison he had come out to find his mother dead, his father near suicide with shame.

FREED, FOUND MOTHER DEAD.

He was led to the witness stand and sworn. This is the story he told.

"Your Honor, you know my record with the law. Eighteen or nineteen years ago, in this very court room, I heard a judge sentence me to serve twenty years in State's prison.

"They took me away then, and I began that terrible term. I served ten years and two months of it and was freed.

"It was a new world I faced when they closed the prison gates behind me. I went home. I found the home broken up—my mother dead.

"My mother was dead and my father met me with reproaches. He was so bitter I was driven away from him. Then he tried to kill himself. I came back, but he reproached me again, and I went away.

"I got into trouble again, Your Honor. I didn't care—didn't want to be better. This time the sentence was six to eight years.

"In prison there was a choice waiting for me. I could flock with the bad men—for there are bad and good men in prison just as thre are anywhere else—or I could try to make something out of myself.

"I decided to try to do something, so I gave the warden my watch and he got me a trombone. I learned to play it, and played in the orchestra in prison.

"After four years and ten months they let me out and sent me to New York to a home for unfortunates, to live till I could find work.

IN TROUBLE AGAIN.

"But I was a stranger in New York. Boston was more like home to me. After two weeks I came back here, and in half an hour I had a job.

"I held that job thirteen months, playing in bands and orchestras in the meantime. Then the job petered out. I had about fifty dollars saved.

"I tried to get in the army band down at Fort Warren, passed the physical examination, but failed to get a place.

"My money gave out. Friends lent me what they could and I earned a little. At last I had not the heart to ask for more. And—I got into trouble again.

"Your Honor, I'm not asking anything. I just wanted to tell you. I've never had a decent show. Eighteen years ago when I was first sent to prison I was just a young, foolish boy. Now I'm a broken man.

"I have tried to do right. This time I told the police the truth, helped all I could in recovering the things I stole. I—I guess that's all, Your Honor."

$100,000,000 BABY TO HAVE NEW PLAYMATE ON HIS NEWPORT FARM

VINSON WALSH M'LEAN.

WASHINGTON, June 11. — Vinson Walsh McLean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, heir to fortunes aggregating $100,000,000, and called "the richest baby in the world," will have another playmate this season, when he accompanies his parents to Black Point Farm, their Summer home near Newport.

This playmate will be the five-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. Shirley Carter, of Warrenton, Va. He has already been the guest of Baby McLean in Washington for several weeks, and so attracted to the child are the parents of the world's richest baby that he is now to spend the Summer at Black Point Farm to keep his playmate from growing lonesome.

Like Baby McLean, Master Carter knows horses. This is what first took Mr. McLean's eye. Ever since Baby McLean has been on the backs of his father's superb mounts, and the Carter boy has had the same manly training. Consequently both boys may be expected to do some riding near Newport this Summer that will open the eyes of those who think children cannot be horsemen.

WOULD BUY ANOTHER'S WIFE

He was an unscrupulous woman-hunter, and when his chase led into another man's home he didn't hesitate. He would even buy the woman he wanted. But in this case the woman's husband—but that would be telling the story. You can get it complete in the July number of Cosmopolitan. The high cost of living has nothing on the cost of being dead, at least in Atlantic County. While prices there have been soaring for necessaries of life those for death have kept pace, as the County Board of Freeholders of Atlantic City learned today when they found the price of gravestones had jumped from $30 to $40.

Laundry Slip Gets Chinese in Trouble

Pasquale Gionoyrioyorio entered Wing Lee's laundry on Cottage street last night and laid down a pink laundry slip and some money. Lee chanted something in reply. Then the Chinaman grabbed a revolver and cleared Gionoyr, etc., into the street. There they clinched and Lee emerged minus the weapon and plus a black eye.

In East Boston Court today Lee was not only accused of assault and carrying the pistol, but of having an opium outfit in his shop. He was held in $500 for a hearing Monday.

REPORT CURLEY WILL OUST BELL, NAMED BY FITZ

An unheaval in the Board of Election Commissioners is under contemplation by Mayor Curley, according to a Boston morning paper. Election Commissioners M. W. Burlen and Tilton S. Bell, the Republican members, are marked for decapitation, and ex-Senator Frank Sieberlich and ex-Councilman Frank B. Crane, Republican supporters of Mayor Curley in the mayoralty fight, are slated for the $3,500 a year positions, according to report.

Commissioner Bell, who was named a year ago by ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, is president of the Dorchester Club. Commissioner Burlen's term expires next year, while Commissioner Bell's expires in 1917.

Deputy election commissioners and clerks are also in line for removal, the Mayor's friends said. He has held several conferences with Chairman John M. Minton, "pooh-bah" of the administration during the wholesale removals of department heads, and with Election Commissioner David B. Shaw.

Commissioner Burlen has the reputation of being one of the best authorities on election laws in the State.

JEROME IN FAVOR OF THAW PLEA

NEW YORK, June 11.—Lawyers for Harry K. Thaw confer with William Travers Jerome today on the terms of a joint application to the Supreme Court for an order permitting Thaw to be taken to Pennsylvania in the custody of the United States marshal for the Federal District in New Hampshire, where Thaw is now held.

Attorney-General Carmody has indorsed the proposal, and Jerome is also said to have agreed to it on condition that the Thaw forces withdraw their petition to the Supreme Court of the United States for admission of Thaw to bail, pending the decision of that court in habeas corpus proceedings. This Thaw's counsel has agreed to do.

It is now practically certain that within the next few days Thaw will have the opportunity of visiting his home in Pittsburgh for the first time since he shot and killed Stanford White on the Madison Square Garden roof on the night of June 25, 1906, nearly eight years ago.

REUNION WITH MOTHER.

The joint petition of Jerome and the Thaw forces will probably be laid before the Supreme Court at Washington tomorrow. The case is expected to be given to Justice Hughes as he is the one most familiar with the Thaw case of all the justices on the Supreme Bench. As long as both sides have agreed, it is believed the order will be signed immediately.

Thaw's request for permission to go to Pennsylvania is based upon affidavits that his presence is required as a witness in the Orphans' Court of Allegheny County, by which the estate of the father, William Thaw, is being administered.

In making an order permitting Thaw to go to Pittsburgh, a liberal time is likely to be allowed for his stay, so he may be available as a witness as long as there is any likelihood of his being required to testify.

In the usual course of procedure, argument upon the appeal in the habeas corpus decision cannot be heard by the Supreme Court in Washington until next October at the earliest, and decision is not likely to be rendered until about next Christmas. Thaw may be allowed until that time to remain in Pittsburgh.

MARSHAL MUST GO.

Thaw will not be free under bail when he goes to Pittsburgh, and will not enjoy the fullness of personal liberty which bail would afford. He is assured, however, reunion with his mother and her family in the Thaw home and a long residence there, perhaps in the rooms he occupied with Evelyn Nesbit after their marriage, April 4, 1905.

Attorney-General Carmody and Jerome, in deciding to accept Thaw's proposal, are reported to have been moved by the superior protection against Thaw's possible outbreaks which the custody of a marshal will afford.

Ethel M. Wilson Is Sent to Sherborn

Ethel M. Wilson, who has a record of ten convictions in ten years for forgery, larceny, evading taxicab fare and other offences, was found guilty by a jury in the East Cambridge Court, of forging a check for $100 on the National Shawmut Bank and was sentenced by Judge Keating to an indefinite term at Sherborn.

CHALMER V. PAINTER, United States artilleryman, whose discharge was won by Mayor Curley, and his bride, the former Miss Helen Marr Bearse.

SOLDIER, SET FREE BY MAYOR, ON HONEYMOON

Mayor Curley received congratulations today on his success as The Little Winged God—the whiles the happy pair on whom his blessing fell were speeding westward on their honeymoon.

"Bless the Mayor; he's a splendid fellow," were the bride's sentiments. She was Helen Marr Bearse of No. 42 Ivy street, Boston. Chalmer V. Painter, one-time of the Ninth Company, Coast Artillery, U. S. A., was the bridegroom.

Uncle Sam stood in the way of the marriage and of a good position open to Painter. Miss Bearse decided she would try to unravel the tangle, so appealed to Mayor Curley for help in securing an honorable discharge for Painter.

The Mayor did his best—with the result that the discharge came to hand in due time—and last night Painter and Miss Bearse went to St. Cecilia's Church in the Back Bay and were married.

Afterward there was a reception at the bride's home on Ivy street; and early today the two left for the West. Returning in September they will live in Boston.

Mayor's Brother to Behead a Dozen

Deputy Collector John J. Curley, the Mayor's brother, formally qualified for his new position as city collector today and took office after the Mayor formally accepted the resignation of City Collector Bowdoin S. Parker and approved the bonds of the new collector. The new head took office just before the close of the day's business and started at once to compile a report of the changes he will recommend. It is understood that nearly a dozen employes in that branch of the municipal service are slated for removal.

Widows' Gratuities Vetoed by Walsh

Governor Walsh today vetoed two bills granting gratuities to the widows of John Joseph Flaherty and Nathan Dexter Pratt, late justices of the Superior Court. The gratuity to Mrs. Flaherty was $2,300 and to Mrs. Pratt about $7,000 and represented the salaries of their late husbands from the time of their deaths until the end of the fiscal year. The Governor said the bills were indefensible and that the widows of judges were no more entitled to gratuities than the widows of laborers in the employ of the State.

The game was between the Federals of this city and Cromwell. The students played on the Middletown team, which won in an eleven-inning game by a score of 4 to 3.

Senate Takes Vote on Canal Measure

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.—The Senate convened today with the expectation that voting on the Panama toll measure would begin late this afternoon or tonight. The first roll call to be reached will be that on the so-called second Simmons amendment. This amendment obtained the right of way when Senator Norris agreed to it and withdrew his amendment.

Dodds Retires from Science Newspaper

Alexander Dodds has retired as managing editor of the Christian Science Monitor. Frederick Dixon, head of the Monitor's European bureau, with offices in London, takes Mr. Dodd's place.

Man Is Sentenced as Result of Raid

Walter Sterling was sentenced to eight months, George Wilson defaulted and the case against Eva McDonald and Margaret Smith was continued in the police court today, as the aftermath of a raid by officers of the East Dedham Street Station on a Shawmut avenue room where an outfit for the preparation of drugs was found.

Sylvia Pankhurst Is Again Arrested

LONDON, June 10.—Sylvia Pankhurst was arrested tonight when she led a band of militant suffragettes to Westminster in an attempt to get an interview with Premier Asquith.

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It If Your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that every one should use:

5 grains Optona (1 tablet),
2 ounces Water.

Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Optona system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefitted and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription promptly. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.

Give Nature a Chance

Everybody Is Equal in the Eyes of Nature!

GIVE Nature a Chance to Breathe You Into a PERFECT FIGURE and HEALTH by Wearing

Professor Charles Munter's "NULIFE" For Man, Woman and Child

☞ Compels Deep Breathing and Keeps You Cool on Hot Days

Try on a NULIFE and you will never be without it, for it compels deep breathing, straightens round shoulders, expands the chest from 2 to 6 inches, reduces the abdomen, rests the back, fills out hollows of neck and chest and rounds out the body to such physical proportions as to GIVE MAN A MILITARY APPEARANCE, WOMAN THE GRACEUL CURVED LINES OF BEAUTY, AND MAKES EVERY CHILD WEARER A STRONG AND ROBUST INDIVIDUAL.

Wearing NULIFE will make you hold your head erect, shoulders thrown back, spine erect and in proper place, and gives you that air of success and confidence that perfect health demands.

You will feel yourself imbued with new spirits, new confidence and new ambition. You will begin to realize that you are breathing properly and with all of your lungs all of the time, and you will understand at once that one Breath of Fresh Air properly inhaled will give more physical energy than a pound of food.

If you are subject to weak lungs, catarrh, asthma and improper breathing, indigestion, tired back, dizzy headache, nervousness, continual fatigue, you can remove the cause at once by wearing a NULIFE, which will hold your body erect and firm and give Nature a chance to perform her work.

A perfect figure depends upon a full set of lungs.

If you desire a perfect figure, wear NULIFE.

NULIFE is a Washable Garment and contains no rubber to rot and cause odors, or steel to rust.

SOLVE PUZZLE PICTURES; WIN PRIZE IN GOLD

Are you in on the Boston AMERICAN'S weekly $500 cash prize contest?

If not, you ought to be. Fact is, everybody's trying to solve the AMERICAN'S puzzle pictures. If you don't happen to be among the number, now is the time to get busy and share in the $500 in gold which the AMERICAN is distributing every week in cash prizes.

This is the really BIG contest. It's simple, too. First you get your copy of the Sunday AMERICAN. Then you study the puzzle pictures. Then you send in your answers.

The contest is a skill and judgment test. Just try it.

Each Sunday the AMERICAN publishes fourteen puzzle pictures. On the same page the AMERICAN also prints the CORRECT ANSWERS. These appear in a list of names or titles, and all you have to do is to pick out the names or titles which correctly accompany the pictures.

There are 175 prizes in the competition—a first prize of $100, a second prize of $50, a third prize of $25, a fourth prize of $15, and so on, the total amounting to $500. This $500 is given away in cash every week.

The contest is open to all readers of the AMERICAN, irrespective of age. The only persons barred are all employes of the AMERICAN and their families.

Every contestant is allowed to submit one set of answers, but this set must contain only one answer to each picture. Any member or all members of a family may submit one set of answers. Each answer must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the AMERICAN, in the numbered spaces corresponding to numbers on the puzzle pictures.

Simple, isn't it? It's a GREAT contest, and the best thing you can do is to try to solve next Sunday's puzzle pictures. You have an opportunity of taking part in a fascinating pastime, which both profits and interests; and further you have a chance of sharing in the $500 weekly prize distribution.

And there are other big reasons why you want to buy the Sunday AMERICAN. One such feature is the Katzenjammers. Everybody knows them—the inimitable, funmaking, side-splitting, ever-joyously-new Katzenjammer kids.

They're back again, are those Katzenjammer kids, with new tricks galore. Every Sunday they take up a whole page in the AMERICAN'S comic section, and to see them is to laugh and be happy.

The kids number their friends among the millions. There never was a series with just the same wholesome human appeal as these youngsters who always are putting something across on Der Captain or somebody else, and who nearly always in the end get a spanking for it.

Here's another thing, too. This Summer the AMERICAN will conduct another contest for amateur photographers. Each Sunday a full page of snapshots sent in by readers will be published and weekly prizes will be awarded as follows: First prize, $10; second, $5; third, $3; fourth, $2.

JIM AND JOHN.

A Brother Act in Municipal Vaudeville.

CAST OF CHARACTERS.

Brother James M. Curley.....Mayor
Brother John J. Curley City Collector
Time ....Now
Scene ....Mayor's Office

(Rising curtain discloses Bro. Jim seated and Bro. John standing.)

BRO. JIM—Morning John, you are now City Collector. You used to be a mere Deputy Collector. Do you know the difference between the two jobs?

BRO. JOHN—You bet—$3,200 a year more.

BRO. JIM—Ssh! Don't speak of any extra expense. I don't like to hear it, even if it's coming to one of the family.

BRO. JOHN—Huh! 'Tisn't any more than Collector Parker got before me.

BRO. JIM—'Sall right, 'sall right, but I can't bear to think of any one getting more. Makes the city bills bigger. My economy spear knows no brother—almost.

BRO. JOHN—Say, lemme sit down. I'm dizzy.

BRO. JIM—Whaddaya mean dizzy?

BRO. JOHN—That Civil Service Commission. They run me into this berth so quick, I ain't got my breath. Why, they had thirty days to confirm your appointment of me and they did it in eight. Gosh! If you'd been raised $3,200 a year in eight days you'd be dizzy and ——

BRO. JIM—Can that $3,200 stuff will you. Just because you used to get $1,800 and now get $5,000 there's no need of singing it here. Take it home and try it on your vacuum cleaner.

BLESS YOU, I PUT IT OVER AS QUICK AS I COULD
THE FIN COM
$5000 JOB
CURLEY
THE BROTHER

BRO. JOHN—Well, the Civil Serviceables only took eight days. They seemed to know what they were doing.

BRO. JIM—'hey knew that knew what they 'ere doing, all ight. But that n't the point. 'ou know I'm conomizing?

BRO. JOHN—ley!

BRO. JIM—conomy, I say. n the most economical Mayor oston ever had.

BRO. JOHN—y, Jim, I heard funny joke esterday. Lemme ell it.

BRO. JIM—Vell, shoot.

BRO. JOHN—'eller says to ie: "Take the vord 'Economical' and make the same letters spell two other words that apply to your brother."

BRO. JIM—Yes. Well?

BRO. JOHN—The answer is: 'One comical.' Get it?

BRO. JIM—Naw.

BRO. JOHN—Why, you take the letters in the word "Economical" and you can rearrange them to spell the two words: "One comical" and you don't have to change 'em much either. Instead of "Economical Mayor" you get——.

BRO. JIM—That's a whale of a joke, I don't think. You've got an "Economical" sense of humor, no matter how you spell it. Now lissen to me——

BRO. JOHN—Yessir.

BRO. JIM—You are City Collector. Your business is to collect and keep on collectin'. Get the money in. Get it in. Jumpin' Jingoes, get it in. I gotta make a showin'. I gotta do it. Ain't I laid off city employes—ain't I fired the girl piano players. Ain't I saved a nickel here and a nickel there! And yet somebody says my administration is costing more than Fitz's.

BRO. JOHN—Well, Jim, all I can do is collect the taxes. I can't go out and make money. I can't——

BRO. JIM—Old stuff, old stuff! It's gotta be done. You know what the word "Collector" really means?

BRO. JOHN—Sure, thirty-two hunnerd more——

BRO. JIM—Sacred snakes, will you quit talking about anything "More." That's all I hear, "More," "More," "More." Lissen—"Collector" comes from the Latin, from two words "Con" and "Lego." You know what "Con" means—to "Con" 'em. "Lego" is the same as our English word "Leggo." Thus we have the word "Collector," meaning to "Con" 'em so they "Leggo."

BRO. JOHN—"Leggo" what?

BRO. JIM—Leggo anything—anything to bring more money into the city. Anything to make a showin'. It's gotta be done. Goodby—get out and collect.

BRO. JOHN (Aside)—Wonder who's collecting these here taxes, anyhow, me or Jim?

(Curtain).

What Cadum Is Made Of

Cadum, the well-known remedy for Eczema and other skin troubles, is one of the very few preparations sold in drug stores that is not secret. A list of its ingredients is printed upon every box. One ingredient is oil of cade, which is recognized by doctors as being one of the best things known for Eczema. Another ingredient is zinc oxide, which dries up the water that forms upon sore places on the skin. Two other ingredients are petrolatum and white wax, which make a covering to protect these sore spots from the air and water. A trial box of Cadum can be secured in any drug store for 10c, but it is cheaper to buy the 25c size, as it contains nearly four times as much as the 10c box.

WAKE UP, YOU BOYS, CIRCUS IS COMIN' TO TOWN

We desire, friends, to ask one question.

What is going to happen in Boston next week?

Any answers? If you are a grown-up, it is ten to one you look bored, yawn a little and come back with: "Well—what IS going to happen?"

But if you're a kid it's ten to one the other way, that you're not bored nor stumped for a minute. Chances are you turn a handspring or a cartwheel, or a flipflop at least and yell: "Circus's comin'! Circus's comin'!"

Along about Saturday every boy in town will be wearing out the seat of his pants squirming around in eager anticipation. Or if he isn't he's not a boy. About Saturday night he'll resolve to lie awake and maybe get up early and go out and see the big yellow circus trains pull into town.

But he goes to sleep just the same—wakes up Sunday morning with a yell. And Monday begins a week of delirious excitement, when school is prison and one can hardly bear to stop for meals.

The big show is going to pitch its tents out at the Huntington avenue grounds—the "Big Top," the side show, the "Munadgery" tent and all the tents that house the fakirs and venders and attractions that cluster on the big show's flank.

It's Barnum & Bailey—synonym since you were a boy yourself for all that is excellence in the circus world. One spoke of Barnum & Bailey as one spoke of heaven, or the country, or the city—depending on where we lived. The circus was the land of imagination and of wonders. Miracles were wrought beneath the high canvas. And—take it from the preliminary announcements—they are still.

Barnum & Bailey is coming—and they're bigger and better than ever. The billboards say so.

Speraw Breaks Leg.

Huyler, Candy Man's Son, Left $198,762

NEW YORK, June 11.—The transfer tax appraisal of the estate of John S. Huyler, Jr., who was gilled by falling under a train, shows that he left property worth $198,762. His mother, Mrs. Rosa F. Huyler, widow of the candy manufacturer, got $50,277 and $28,757 went to his three brothers, Coulter, David and Frank McK. Huyler. He gave $14,358 each to John S. Huyler Held and Abigail S. Huyler Held, nephew and niece, and $21,196 to his half-brother, William C. Dodge.

TIMEPIECES IN HENNIKER HELP 'SILENT' WOOD

HENNIKER, N. H., June 11.—The case of "Silent" Gene Wood, jailed on the charge of murdering Howard W. Peaslee, the Quaker toy manufacturer, will never go beyond the grand jury, if that far, declared his counsel, Attorney Joseph Donigan today.

State officials admit that Wood's exoneration will automatically result from an arrest likely to occur any day now, unless evidence miscarries. Chief Inspector Clifford B. Hildreth of Manchester has been instructed to proceed just as if no arrest had been made in the case.

Public clamor demanded this renewal of inquiry along lines not known when Wood was arrested. Hence the doubt and lively expectations.

Although few of the witnesses consulted clocks or watches when the fatal shot was heard, the consensus of opinion among the most conservative, fixes the shooting at not earlier than 8:52 p. m., and estimates range all the way from that to 9 o'clock.

Even State officials have been forced to accept the 8:52 mark and several of their most reliable witnesses are just as willing to place it nearer 9.

Arthur Bailey and Robert Bishop, State witnesses, testify that Gene Wood was talking with them at 9 o'clock that night on the veranda of the Riverside Hotel, a few paces from the village square and more than a mile from the scene of the murder. Bailey and Bishop say Wood came over Stone Bridge at a leisurely stride and that he voluntarily joined them and talked about farming. He was as calm as ever. He was not excited or out of wind. Bailey thinks he joined them a few minutes before the 9 o'clock whistle blew.

Fitzgerald Calls for Business in Schools

"In the Boston schools there is too much teaching of culture and not enough of business principles," declared ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald in speaking before the Malden Board of Trade. "The curricula of the schools of Boston and Malden are too hide bound. They are not flexible enough to differentiate between the different grades of intelligence in the pupils."

MURPHY TRIAL REVEALS POLICE WAR IN NORWOOD

Selectmen of Norwood continue tonight the public hearing to former Policeman Cornelius C. Murphy, discharged from the police force on the charge of stealing two sweaters from a furnishing goods store during a fire.

The hearing discloses friction in the police department of Norwood. Two fellow policemen, one of them a cousin of Murphy, testified that they saw him take away two sweaters from the store of Michael Deeb and wear them away under his uniform coat. Deeb declared that he had never lost any goods during the fire. He created a sensation when he testified that Officer Dennis Hayes, who accuses Officer Murphy, came to him and threatened to have him sent to prison for six months if he persisted in testifying that Officer Murphy didn't steal the sweaters.

Charges of "conspiracy" and "frame up" and that Officer Murphy was the victim of police management were hurled at Chief of Police Riddle by attorneys for Murphy. Chief Riddle denied that he ever said he would "get Murphy."

Wrigley Values Gum Name at $7,000,000

CINCINNATI, June 11.—The trade name of Wrigley's "Spearmint" chewing gum is valued at $7,000,000 in a suit filed in United States District Court in behalf of the William Wrigley, Jr., Company of West Virginia against the Helmet Company of Cincinnati.

An American Talk to Its Readers

Boston's Choicest Market For Musical Instruments

¶ Shakespeare uttered a great truth when he wrote—

> "The man who hath no music in his soul or who is not moved by the concord of sweet sound is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils."

¶ Indeed, music is the universal language, and it would be difficult to find, in this day of advancement and enlightenment, a man "who is not moved by the concord of sweet sound."

¶ In fact, the "vast majority" has an ear for music which makes the love of it practically world-wide. And this accounts for the deep interest which every man, every woman, every youth and every child has in music, whether it is produced by a hurdy-gurdy or a piano with a Paderewski at the keys.

¶ No happy, normal person is immune from the charm of music—none is anxious to escape its spell. Equally are they susceptible to selling appeal from manufacturers of and dealers in musical instruments of merit.

¶ In the advertising columns of the American, manufacturers of the best musical instruments in the world describe their products, mention where they can be seen and say how much they cost.

¶ In the course of a year hundreds of columns of piano and other musical instrument advertisements are published in the American. Those who write this advertising news include the most reliable piano dealers and piano manufacturers in the country. They are earnestly honest and seriously truthful in every statement they make, because their success depends upon creating a favorable state of mind for their respective products.

¶ You can read this piano advertising—which is really piano news—with complete confidence, and you should, in your own interest, read it carefully and continuously.

¶ Then, when the important question of piano selection comes up, you will know just what to do—will have formed an opinion as to the particular piano you prefer.

¶ The American's circulation is in excess of 400,000 copies daily. It reaches the homes of progressive, well-to-do folk—homes containing people who are not only musically inclined, but who buy musical instruments of their own.

¶ That the makers and sellers of pianos and other musical instruments appreciate the character of the American's circulation is best shown by a glance at the names of high-standing firms who are users of the American's advertising columns:

Chickering & Sons
Columbia Graphophone Company
Oliver Ditson Company
Hallet & Davis
Ivers & Pond Piano Company
Charles S. Norris
Harry Rosen
M. Steinert & Sons Company
Charles Stieff
F. H. Thomas Company.
Vose & Sons

¶ American readers are thus given almost unceasing opportunities to shop economically and satisfactorily when it comes to the purchase of a piano.

¶ This is only one of the many lines of dependable merchandise advertised successfully in the American — another reason why it will pay you to read its display advertising columns carefully and continuously.

KERN TO PRESS SENATE VOTE TOLLS TONIGHT

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Majority leader Keren let it be known today that he will press the tolls repeal bill to a vote in the Senate tonight unless Senators not heard from insist at the last moment upon making extended set speeches. Senator Kern is willing to hold a night session if necessary to wind up the long debate on the exemption repeal, but if developments indicate a vote cannot be reached tonight he will put it off until tomorrow.

Although the Norris-Simmons compromise amendment was put through by a vote of 50 to 24, no such substantial majority is predicted for the bill on its final passage.

The fact that President Wilson is displeased at the idea of any compromise is expected to influence the vote, but Majority Leader Kern and other leading Democrats in the Senate believe that half a loaf is better than none, and will accordingly put through the amended bill.

Characterizing the action of the Democratic party on the tolls question as a "record of blundering never equalled in the history of political acrobatics since the government by parties began," Senator Brandegee of Connecticut, Republican, today in the Senate urged the passage of the repeal bill.

"Theplatform declaration in favor of this exemption," he said, "was interjected toward the end of the platform between a denunciation of bounties and subsidies from the public treasury and a conventional approval of pure food and quarantine.

"The present Secretary of State, Mr. Bryan, who was the chief architect of both the platform and the candidate, who until after the election stood upon it as soon as he had recovered from his dazed condition and was freed from the anaesthetic, began to appreciate the effect of the operation to which he had been subjected—I will not say the 'joker' which had been slipped over on him—and forthwith denounced his own work as self-contradictory, absurd and destructive of fundamental and historic Democratic doctrines.

"The United States is an honest nation. The vast majority of our citizens intend to keep its word. If this nation has made a contract the great majority of the people was to see the contract kept and not broken.

John J. Walsh, son of Mrs. Mary E. Walsh, of No. 415 Cabot street, Beverly, is on his honeymoon today with his bride, who was Miss Beatrice B. Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Walsh of Lynn. The bride's father is general organizer for the United Shoe Workers of America.

The marriage took place at the parochial residence of St. Mary's Church of Lynn at 6 o'clock in the evening. The ceremony was performed by Monsignor Arthur J. Teeling. John J. Sullivan of Lynn was best man and Miss Helen M. Walsh of Lynn was bridesmaid. The ushers were Stephen Walsh, Jr., William Jennings, James Eagan and Frederick Walsh of Lynn.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, No. 235 Boston street. The parents of the bride and the mother of the bridegroom assisted in receiving.

Cambridge People Protest Car Service to Atlantic Avenue

A vigorous protest is brewing in Cambridge over the poor car service to the South Station and points along Atlantic avenue. The most direct route from Harvard square calls for the payment of an extra fare and is as follows: Harvard square via the Cambridge tunnel to Park street, Park street via the subway to Boylston, and Boylston street to the Rowe's wharf cars, which pass the corner of Boylston and Tremont.

Some time ago the Elevated issued transfers from the Boylston street subway cars to the Rowe's wharf line. This later was discontinued, and now an extra fare is necessary.

LYNN GIRL BACK, NEVER KNEW SHE WAS MISSING

Miss Jessie Brown, the twenty-year-old Lynn and Peabody girl who was reported to the police as mysteriously missing since Saturday, reported herself to the Lynn police today, safe and sound.

She had not been harmed. She didn't know, until today, that she was missing.

She had been an an errand, also car-riding and calling.

This noon Sergeant Andrew Besson at Lynn police station looked up to see a girl and a woman come in. The girl said:

"I'm Jessie Brown. Are you looking for me?"

"Why, yes," said the sergeant. "We have been. You were reported as missing."

"Well," said the girl simply, "I've been living with this lady, Mrs. Rose Larrabee of South Peabody, since Saturday. I didn't know the police were looking for me till this very morning.

"You see, I went from Mrs. John J. Regan's home at No. 8 Logan street, Lynn, where I have been working, to go on an errand Saturday afternoon. I took a car ride to Peabody and then I went over to South Peabody to call on Mrs. Larrabee, whom I know. Then I visited there for a few days. But, if I had known people were looking for me I would have come back sooner."

The Peabody police were said to be actively searching for Miss Jessie, but she was not in the main village. She was over in South Peabody.

Reassure Senator There's No Doubt of 'Lodge Mountain'

Senator Lodge has received from the Coast and Geodetic Survey a photograph of a mountain of 11,000 feet in the Fairweather range of Southern Alaska, which has been designated in his honor. In 1903 Senator Lodge was a member of the Alaska International Boundary Commission.

Washington dispatches say that when Superintendent Tittman informed Senator Lodge of the honor he exclaimed:

"What, you have actually put me on the map with no river of doubt near?"

Tittman assured Explorer Roosevelt's friend it was an eighteen-karat mountain.

RAPS POLICE ON ABUSE OF USING GUN AND CLUB

Director of Public Safety Cunningham of Cambridge, in suspending Reserve Officer Dennis W. O'Brien for shooting a fleeing boy, took occasion to say that:

"The trouble with many police officers is that they are guilty of abusing the privilege to use their revolver and their billy entirely too often."

Officer O'Brien was suspended for thirty days with loss of pay. The suspension began today.

Officer O'Brien shot sixteen-year-old Ernest L. Blevins in the shoulder May 28. Nickel and penny-in-the-slot machines were being broken open in Cambridge and the police were given urgent orders to look out for the thieves. Young Blevins and a boy about his own age were caught at a gum machine on Western avenue.

The boys fled and were pursued by Officers O'Brien and Horgan. The chase of Blevins by Officer O'Brien led over fences and through back yards. Three times O'Brien fired at the fleeing lad, the last shot taking effect in the boy's shoulder. The wound was not serious.

SENATORS URGE STATE TO BUY BOSTON & MAINE

The following is part of a brief submitted to the Legislative Committee on Railroads by State Senators Charles M. Cox and Charles E. Burbank, urging the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to buy the Boston & Maine Railroad:

"We believe that the two great New England railroad systems should be separated for two reasons: first, because they should be competitive, and second, because their interests are not identical. The natural sphere of development for the Boston & Maine is Northern New England, focusing on Boston; the natural terminus and centre of control for the New Haven is New York and not Boston. Our interests are so numerous and so diversified that it is impossible for one man to be at the head of a unified railroad system here and be able to give time to the reasonable demands of the numerous shippers and patrons.

"We believe in the good faith of the authorities in Washington and of our Governor in respect to the demand for the separation of the railroads.

"But the one essential idea which should be brought home to the attention of every New Englander at this time in regard to this matter is that when the controlling interest in a railroad is for sale, as at present, some other greater railroad or some great financial interest can and will afford to pay a higher price for the stock when sold in one block, than could possibly be paid by small investors.

CO-OPERATIVE PLAN.

"In other words the control of the Boston & Maine by such a system as the Pennsylvania Railroad or the Canadian Pacific, would be worth more than the dividends on the stock, and they, or some other railroad, will doubtless overbid smaller investors and without reasonable doubt control the Boston & Maine Railroad.

"The reason for this is found in the fact that they wish to divert freight and passenger traffic to their own lines, and with the control of the Boston & Maine they could and would do this. But what might be for the interest of such a great railroad system is exactly contrary to the interest of New Englanders. We do not want any freight or passenger traffic diverted from natural channels, but we want it to go straight to the mark by the most direct route.

"We believe that the only way to accomplish this result is for Massachusetts to exercise its option and buy the stock of the Boston & Maine Railroad, now held by the Boston Railroad Holding Company, but along with that action should go an intelligent and improved method of railroad management, which we now suggest and set forth, and which would to a great extent, if not wholly, eliminate the evil of a "politically managed" public service corporation.

"Our plan is for an entirely new method of election of the board of directors for the Boston & Maine Railroad, to be substantially as follows:

"The board to be limited in number to twelve, they to be elected as follows:

"Three to be appointed by the Governor of Massachusetts and his Council.

"Two to be elected by the minority stockholders.

TO COST $8,135,758.13.

"One each to be appointed, if the States so desire, by the authorities of the States of New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont.

"One to be elected by the employes of the railroad itself.

"Three to be appointed from a list of, say, ten names to be handed to the Governor of Massachusetts and his Council by such trade organizations acting together for that purpose as the State Board of Trade, the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Boston Clearing House Association.

"The amount of money required to buy the 219,189 common and the 6,543 preferred shares of Boston & Maine stock held by the Boston Holding Company at the present market price of 125½ per share for the common and 150 per share for the preferred, would be $8,135,758.13.

Worcester Woman Protests Treatment of Organ Monkeys

WORCESTER, June 11.—A letter has been sent to the Mayor and to the License Board by Miss Edith Lolston, secretary for the Worcester branch of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, protesting against the issuing of licenses to hand-organ grinders who have with them a monkey to wheedle pennies from the admiring crowds.

"The society is convinced," she wrote, "that these little defenseless creatures are cruelly treated, and at the best it is a degrading sight to see them on the street. They are poorly fed and overworked and must wear a heavy uniform which is a burden to them in the heated summer time."

1915 SOLONS MAY CONSIDER STATE STREET TROLLEY BILL

Committee on Railroads has come to the relief of the National Shawmut Bank, the Old Colony Trust Company, and the Commonwealth Trust Company, and, with only four dissenters, recommends the passage of the Hampden Railroad bill.

* * *

Bill provides that the Boston & Maine may acquire the world-famous "railroad de luxe," either by lease or by purchase.

* * *

And thus saves to the Shawmut, the Old Colony and the Commonwealth the $1,400,000 they loaned to the Hampden INVESTMENT Company on the security of ALL the stock of the Hampden RAILROAD Company.

* * *

Saving also, it may be, the $1,900,000 loaned by the savings banks of Massachusetts—with the approval of Bank Commissioner Augustus Thorndike—to the Hampden RAILROAD Company, on notes endorsed by the $200,000 Hampden INVESTMENT Company.

* * *

The Hampden Railroad is substantially fifteen miles long.

* * *

Old Mr. Homebody, who can hardly afford to lose the price of this month's certified-milk bill, finds it easy to sympathize with bankers who stood to lose $3,300,000—of other people's money.

* * *

But you know what they say to the Old Mr. Homebodies!

* * *

"WHY don't you be MORE CAREFUL?"

* * *

Appears as if a man could be in better business than advising Democratic legislators to "follow their leader."

* * *

Governor Walsh, in his inaugural, recommended the establishment of a central purchasing agency for all the State departments and institutions.

* * *

Bill providing for such a purchasing agency failed yesterday in the House by a vote of 91 to 105.

* * *

Republicans voted AGAINST the bill almost to a man. AMERICAN reporter was present when one Republican leader was advising his boys to "kill it!"

* * *

Four Democrats also voted against the bill: Joseph La Flamme of Sturbridge, Charles A. Le Gro of Palmer, M. F. McGrath of Charlestown and James J. Murphy of Ward 12.

* * *

Much more disastrous was the fact that no less than twenty Democrats were "absent or not voting."

* * *

This was NOT a platform bill. There was no pledge of this sort in the Democratic platform. The Governor, himself, declared today that a similar provision remains in his bill proposing a consolidation of the State institutions under one head.

* * *

Nevertheless, the principle enunciated by the Governor was in this bill, the Republican organization fought it gallantly and the Democratic absentees were:

* * *

Cobb of Clinton, Conroy of Cambridge, Cronin of Ward 14, Cummings of Ward 20, Fleming of Grafton, Kenney of Ward 21, Kenney of Ward 17, Martin Lomasney, Lynch of Cambridge, Mahoney of Worcester, Mansfield of Rockland, McInerney of Ward 19, McLaughlin of Ward 12 and McLaughlin of Ward 3, Mitchell of Springfield, Murphy of Ward 4, Murray of Ward 18, Reilly of Ward 17, Robert Robinson of Ward 8 and John F. Sullivan of Ward 2—Total 20.

* * *

Thus was lost an opportunity to do something in the direction of Economy, which everybody preaches at campaign times.

* * *

Thirteen of the missing are Boston Democrats. Eleven out of the thirteen are Boston Democrats, for signing whose Larger City Council bill the Governor has received the lambasting of his career up to date.

* * *

With Lomasney and Robinson among the grateful eleven!

* * *

Your attention is called most respectfully to the important fact that the proposed Initiative and Referendum amendment to the State Constitution is now before the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

* * *

The only question before the House, on this bill, is whether it shall be submitted to the people of Massachusetts.

* * *

There is no chance that the people can vote upon the question before the month of November in the year 1915.

* * *

And they will not have the opportunity then unless the proposed amendment is sent along by the House and Senate of this year and the House and Senate of next year.

* * *

A paragraph of the proposed Article of Amendment is illuminative:

* * *

> The legislative authority of the Commonwealth, it says, is vested in the General Court; but the people reserve to themselves the Initiative, which is the power to propose laws, resolves and amendments to the Constitution, and to enact, adopt or reject the same at the polls without concurrence of the General Court or of the Governor; and the people also reserve to themselves the Referendum; which is the power at their own option to approve or reject at the polls any law or resolve of the General Court.

* * *

The proposed amendment comes before the House backed by a favorable report of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments and a later favorable report by the Committee on Ways and Means.

* * *

Hearing on the Bay State Street Railway-Boston Elevated Railway Consolidation bill—with the "Narrow Gauge" on the side—is resumed today before the Committee on Street Railways and the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, sitting jointly.

* * *

Public protest against this bill is based, in the main, on the fact that it is suddenly brought to public notice when legislative trunks are packed and when everybody is ready for adjournment.

* * *

Suggestion that Metropolitan Boston be sliced into "zones," provision that the Commonwealth Street Railway Company may increase existing fares, and the further provision that the consolidated company may issue bonds to TWICE the amount of the capital stock, make this trolley merger bill something to be considered carefully.

* * *

It being now apparent that the people of Greater Boston are in no mood to have this thing put over on them at the present writing, it is intimated that its sponsors are ready to accept a legislative reference to the next General Court.

* * *

It is devoutly to be hoped that, in the meantime, somebody may come forward to tell us more about the "zones" and to explain all about the new rates and fares.

> Lowell, Mass., Sept. 1, 1913.
> Massachusetts Milk Consumers' Association, No. 6 Beacon street, Boston.
>
> Gentlemen: If elected, I agree to vote for the bill advocated by you giving the State Board of Health adequate powers over the milk supply. Such life-saving legislation should be placed upon the statute books as soon as possible.
>
> (Name) HENRY J. DRAPER.
> (Address) 85 Branch street.

* * *

Henry J. Draper, a Democrat, of No. 85 Branch street, Lowell, having signed the above out-and-out pledge, was duly elected to the Massachusetts Senate.

* * *

Yesterday the Senate killed the Clean Milk bill 15 to 22.

* * *

This was the roll call:

* * *

AGAINST THE BILL—Bazeley, Boyer, J. P. Brennan of Cambridge, Burbank, Chase, Clark, Doyle of New Bedford, DRAPER OF LOWELL, Fisher, Gifford, Gordon of Springfield, Hobbs of Worcester, Mack of North Adams, McCarthy, McLane of Fall River, Norwood, O'Rourke of Worcester, Sheehan of Holyoke, Sibley, Ward, Wells of Haverhill and Williams—22.

* * *

FOR THE BILL—Bellamy, J. H. Brennan, Dean, Eldridge, Fitzgerald, Hicker, Hilton, Horgan, Johnson, Langelier, Leonard, McGonagle, Nichols, Tetler and Timilty—15.

* * *

Not that it made any particular difference in the result, but the shift of Senator Draper of Lowell appears to call for a public statement of some sort.

* * *

It was taken for granted that the "country" Senators would vote with the organized milkmen, and that Senators from the country-city districts might find it expedient to do likewise. Hostile votes of some Senators from strictly "city" districts, however, were surprising.

* * *

Latest bills to be vetoed by Governor Walsh would have given $7010.76 to the widow of former Justice Nathan Dexter Pratt and $2,306.46 to the widow of former Justice John Joseph Flaherty, both of the Superior Court:

* * *

Says Governor Walsh:

* * *

> If the practice is sound, in these and other cases, a general law should be enacted providing for such a gratuity at the death of EVERY EMPLOYE OF THE COMMONWEALTH.

* * *

> NO SOUND DISTINCTION CAN BE MADE BETWEEN A GRATUITY OF THIS KIND TO THE WIDOW OF A JUSTICE OF THE SUPERIOR COURT AND A GRATUITY TO THE WIDOW OF THE HUMBLEST LABORER IN THE COMMONWEALTH. IN FACT, STRONGER REASONS MAY BE URGED WHY DEPENDENTS OF THOSE STATE EMPLOYES WHO RECEIVE SMALL SALARIES SHOULD BE GIVEN A GRATUITY SIMILAR TO THE ONE PROVIDED IN THESE BILLS.

* * *

Railroad forecast for today—indications that the Committee on Railroads will recommend "no legislation" on the Railroad Message of Governor Walsh accompanying the agreement outlined between the Government at Washington and officials of the New Haven Railroad.

* * *

State House view of this situation is that this means that the Boston & Maine outfit, or the New Haven outfit—one or both—desire no legislation and invite the Wilson administration to "do its worst."

* * *

Members of the Committee on Railroads were picked by the President of the Senate, Republican, and the Speaker of the House, Republican. Politically: Republicans, 10, Democrats, 5.

* * *

Public hearings on the New Haven-Boston & Maine situation have "closed." Next meeting, "executive" (that is, private), 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

* * *

Forecast printed above—like everything in politics and legislation—subject to change without notice.

* * *

Senator Clarence W. Hobbs, Jr., Republican, a Worcester attorney, has succeeded in having the anti-injunction bill further postponed.

* * *

The bill—properly a bill to "make lawful certain agreements between employes and laborers, and to LIMIT THE ISSUING OF INJUNCTIONS IN CERTAIN CASES" has been before the Senate for two weeks.

* * *

Hobbs has this time had it postponed until Wednesday of next week.

* * *

That date appears to be the 17th of June, generally celebrated in these parts as a holiday.

* * *

As interesting as one of the games in the World Series are the performances of Statesmen on measures like the anti-injunction bill.

This Democrat Has Betrayed His Party

WILLIAM E. HICKEY,
of Ward 15, Boston.

This man is one of the Democratic Representatives who were absent when he knew or ought to have known that the vote on the Constitutional Convention was to be taken in the Legislature.

The Democrats were solemnly pledged on their honor to favor a Constitutional Convention, in which the great questions of reform could be taken up and settled once for all. Almost every State in the Union has had a Constitutional Convention since we had our last one. Governor Walsh recommended it in his inaugural message.

One way of betraying a party platform is by being absent when your vote is needed on a question involving a platform pledge.

The Initiative and Referendum bill will soon come up for a vote.

Democratic traitors can kill this bill by being absent when the vote is taken and thus permitting the corporation men in the Legislature, WHO HAVE MORE courage than the runaways, to vote it down.

Is this the scheme of these Democrats?

If it is their scheme, they are as silly as the ostrich who sticks his head in the sand and thinks that nobody can see him.

Urge $175,000 North Beacon St. Bridge

Watertown and Boston were before the Committee on Roads and Bridges at the State House today, by their representatives, to urge the committee to report the bill for the construction of a new concrete bridge with side facings of granite, to replace the present old wooden bridge on North Beacon street crossing the Charles River. This old bridge has become so decrepit that teh Public Service Commission has prohibited the street railway from running its cars over it. It is also condemned for heavy teaming. The bill as printed calls for an appropriation of $125,000, but the proponents today said that this was an error, and that the amount should be $175,000.

Health and Beauty Hints

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Marguerite: You should make up and use this harmless eye tonic and you will have no further trouble with your eyes: In ½ pint clear water dissolve 1 ounce crystos. Put 2 or 3 drops in each eye twice a day for a while and the smart and ache will entirely disappear. The crystos tonic will give almost instant relief to tired, aching eye-muscles and its timely use frequently overcomes the need for glasses.

City Girl: Yes, some soaps have a tendency to rob the scalp of all its oil, frequently causing a mild form of eczema. Get from your druggist a small, original package of canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, then pour this mixture on the head slowly and rub well. The thick, cleansing lather will dissolve all dust, dandruff and excess oil and greatly invigorate the scalp and hair roots. Rinsing leaves the scalp immaculately clean, while the hair dries quickly and is greatly enriched in color and brilliancy. Canthrox shampoos, if used regularly, will correct scalp troubles and induce the hair to grow in thick and beautiful.

Priscilla: The old-fashioned kardene tonic is Nature's best helper, and a course of treatment of this famous blood cleanser and tissue-builder restores strength and vitality to the weak, wan, worn body. It is easily and cheaply made at home—just dissolve ½ cupful sugar and 1 ounce kardene in ½ pint alcohol (not whisky), then add hot water to make a full quart. The dose is a tablespoonful before each meal. This tonic restores lost appetite, builds up and strengthens the body, gives to the skin a clear, healthy glow and guards against bodily ills.

Mrs. A. I. M.: To retain the velvety smoothness and healthy tint of your complexion, apply daily a spurmax lotion, made by dissolving 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel or hot water, to which add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. This protects the perfect complexion and will make a "muddy," oily or blotchy skin clear and pleasingly beautiful.

Ella: You can keep your face free from ugly hairy growths by using the following treatment when necessary: Mix a little powdered delatone with water and apply the paste to the objectionable hairs. After about two minutes rub off and the hairs come with it. Washing the skin leaves it soft and free from blemish.

Maria L.: Electric scalp massages will not do as much for your scalp as will a plain quinzoin hair tonic, made by adding 1 ounce quinzoin to ½ pint alcohol, in which is then poured ½ pint water. Manipulate the scalp thoroughly when you use this tonic and you will be surprised how quickly the dry, scaly condition will disappear. Then, too, this treatment will restore the proper lustre and soft fluffiness to your hair. I unhesitatingly recommend this quinzoin tonic for dandruff, faded, streaky or gray hair, because of the great good it has done for others.

Mrs. de L.: If you are getting too fat mix together 4 ounces parnotis and 1½ pints hot water. When cool strain and take 1 tablespoonful before meals until weight is where you want it. This is a safe, harmless method of fat-reduction and does not depend on dieting or unusual exercising. The parnotis treatment is gentle in action and restores the symmetrical lines to the figure.

Eve: Wrinkles and premature age marks are quickly erased from the skin by the following treatment: Into ½ pint cold water dissolve 1 ounce almozoin and add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let stand one day, then at night apply generously to skin, covering the wrinkles. This protects the surface and stimulates the blood vessels just beneath the skin and so energizes the starved tissues underneath the creases that they gradually assume their proper size—then the wrinkles or lines will have vanished. As a skin-cleanser and rejuvenator of the complexion the almozoin cream-jelly is not equalled. All blemishes, blackheads, skin roughness and sallowness vanish as if by magic.

HUERTA WILL ALLOW REBEL TO SUCCEED HIM AS PRESIDENT

TO SELECT REBEL AS RULER OF MEXICO

By LAURENCE TOD,

Staff Correspondent of the American.

MEDIATION HEADQUARTERS, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 11.—A Constitutionalist will be selected by the mediation conference for provisional president of Mexico.

The intention of General Carranza, "first chief" of the revolution and now declared provisional president by right of arms, to be one a candidate for the elective presidency will be [illegible]. The entire political and military organization which has upheld General Huerta during his rule [illegible] Mexico [illegible] will be [illegible] but effectually wiped out.

These facts stand out clearly today from the midst of doubt and surmise which has veiled the progress of the mediators during the past four days.

The first of these facts is stated [illegible] the authority of [illegible] the mediators who declared positively that no other solution than the recognition of the triumph of the Constitutionalists was possible.

The second act was [illegible] to follow as a matter of course. The Constitutionalists will have no other permanent leader as conditions now indicate, than the man who has guided them from obscure revolt to control of the country.

The third fact was conceded as necessary to stable government under a party which has fought the Huerta regime since it rose upon the collapse of the Madero [illegible].

HUERTA MEN TO AGREE.

The Huerta delegates, Senor [illegible], Elguero and Rodriguez are [illegible] by [illegible] to agree to the [illegible] of a Constitutionalist to [illegible] provisional government. They [illegible] merely that he be put into office by the constitutional [illegible] through appointment by General Huerta as Foreign Minister. Huerta would then resign and [illegible] would become provisional head of [illegible].

This attitude [illegible] of the South American [illegible] is freely confessed by him to [illegible] that the crisis in the negotiations has been met and passed. Huerta has bowed to his [illegible], brought on by the implacable attitude of the administration at Washington.

The Huerta delegates have decided it is better for their party to [illegible] a Constitutionalist [illegible] personality shall have been approved by [illegible] forced to [illegible] a leader of the Villa type.

CARRANZA THE VICTOR.

"The Mexican [illegible] must recognize by now that Carranza is the victor in the military struggle," said the envoy. "They must [illegible] as we do, that the great majority of Mexicans are now possessed by Constitutionalist sympathies. They must [illegible] too, that a Constitutionalist who has been selected by common consent would be better for Mexico than one taking the city by armed force, and would undoubtedly have to fight against a counter-revolution for the very reason of his being primarily a military ruler."

Agreement here that a Constitutionalist shall be provisional president means honorable peace for every faction in Mexico. This vital [illegible] of the proceedings has been taken without the knowledge of the contents of Carranza's note to the mediators, which is still undelivered. It signifies merely the determination of the mediators to avoid at any cost the failure of the conference. It is the prize offered for a friendly answer from the rebels.

From the first the United States has demanded that Carranza be consulted. Beginning with stout [illegible] the mediators have gradually shifted ground to a point where they [illegible] that either the Constitutionalists must be accepted as the [illegible] the conference or the United States will be forced to recognize a provisional government [illegible] Carranza.

The man for provisional president has yet to be named. The Mexicans have submitted a long list of possibilities. The Americans have replied [illegible] to the extent of requiring that the man be one who has been identified with the revolution. The Huerta delegates will save their dignity [illegible] naming the candidate whom Huerta himself will place in office.

MONEY FAMINE IN TAMPICO; BIG OIL BUSINESS SUSPENDED

TAMPICO (by messenger to Laredo, Tex.), June 11.—This city is in a state of financial stagnation. No [illegible] business is at a standstill [illegible] hundreds of people [illegible] here expecting [illegible] are [illegible] back to the States.

[illegible] worth half a million dollars are [illegible] the streets without the [illegible] issued after the death of Francisco Madero [illegible] caused a panic among the people [illegible] in town is [illegible]. Rather than [illegible] tradesmen will give free [illegible] of their goods.

The oil companies are having great difficulty in collecting enough money to pay off their men. The exportation of oil has been practically suspended.

The rebels have men on guard at the oil heads and will not permit a barge to come down the river without a special pass. They have placed a tax on every barrel of oil that leaves the port. Governor Caballero has [illegible] the oil company officials that he will guard their property, but that it will require 200,000 pesos and he would like them to contribute this amount. It is a case of hold-up.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Dispatches received at the State Department today from Consul Canada at Vera Cruz confirm reports of interrupted railroad communication between that place and Mexico City. KERMIT ROOSEVELT AND MISS WILLARD WEDDED IN CHURCH

Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, who was Miss Belle W. Willard of Richmond, Va., who plighted troth to second son of former President in Madrid church today, following civil ceremony yesterday

MADRID, June 11.—In the presence of a brilliant throng, with the uniforms of diplomatists and army and navy officers forming an attractive contrast with the elaborate gowns and jewels of the women, Miss Belle Wyatt Willard, daughter of Mr. Joseph E. Willard, the American Ambassador to Spain and Mrs. Willard, today became the wife of Kermit Roosevelt by a religious ceremony at the chapel of the British embassy.

Madrid was much interested in today's ceremonies and crowds thronged the streets through which the carriages with the bridal party passed. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, father of the bridegroom, was a centre of interest. The favors which King Alfonso and Queen Victoria have showered so liberally on the young couple were mirrored apparently in the sentiments of the multitude.

Promptly on the stroke of high noon the bride entered the chapel leaning on the arm of her father. She wore a dress of ivory satin and tulle. There was a court train of considerable length. Her veil was of tulle and lace and her orange blossoms were interwoven with rare lace.

SISTER ATTENDS BRIDE.

Following her came the maid of honor, Miss Mary Elizabeth Willard, the sister of the bride. She wore white satin with a tunic of exquisite pale blue tulle.

The bridesmaids were clad in dresses of white tulle, with tunics. They were Her Serene Highness, the Princess of Thurn and Taxis, Miss Katherine Page, daughter of Walter H. Page, American Ambassador, [illegible] Vere [illegible] daughter of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Christian of [illegible]. [illegible] carried bouquets of [illegible] and wore [illegible] with [illegible] yellow ribbons [illegible].

Schumann-Heink [illegible] for divorce from W[illegible].

[illegible] at least, [illegible] voice [illegible].

SAYS UNJUST STIGMA.

[illegible] the tale of my divorce and William Rapp's perfidy. I must bear [illegible] stigma. Nobody takes into consideration the fact that the other side of the story was forbidden. People do not wait to hear the other woman.

"Madame Schumann-Heink is lauded as the model mother of the stage. She is pictured as gentle, home-loving, kind and noble of heart, as well as of voice. But people will hear my name recalled and say, 'O, yes, you [illegible] the woman [illegible] Schumann-Heink's divorce.'

"Let me tell you that there is another side of this story. I am guilty of the great crime of being poor. I became a widow ten years ago, and these ten years have been mighty dark, [illegible]. Sordid [illegible] than well-turned phrases.

"I have [illegible] and my little nephew to care for and I keep. The [illegible] I must [illegible] and my mother will receive from [illegible] the love and care that she [illegible] upon me. I have no income except that which I am able to [illegible]. I turned to the commonest [illegible] livelihood, renting rooms.

HOW SHE MET RAPP.

"Two years [illegible] Rapp [illegible] Madame S[illegible] he came to [illegible] Home street [illegible] Bronx [illegible]. He appeared to me [illegible] gentleman [illegible] I rented him [illegible].

"William Rapp [illegible] the noblest [illegible] It was [illegible] of high ideals [illegible] purpose [illegible] Heink.

[illegible] Have I not seen his letters to [illegible] Have I not heard [illegible] story, the story he was not permitted to tell? Am I not in position to judge her as she caused me to be judged?

"And what manner of [illegible]

HELD HIS LOVE.

"Madame Schumann-Heink [illegible] was able to hold his attention [illegible] told you my estimate of [illegible] How should I? We discussed private matters [illegible] other.

"[illegible] relations were absolutely proper. I [illegible] to say it. And I presume [illegible] read [illegible] that I moved from the Bronx [illegible] Mr. Rapp [illegible] rooms [illegible] Without the [illegible] I derived from renting [illegible] apartments [illegible] I moved here to Manhattan [illegible] Mr. Rapp [illegible] all [illegible] a book [illegible] German [illegible] at the rear of [illegible] of the [illegible].

HIS LETTERS VERY DEAR.

"But [illegible] weak [illegible] this geography [illegible] I am following the [illegible] of the woman—to defend [illegible] terrible innuendos and [illegible]. Not a line in any of [illegible] was suggestive. Not once did [illegible] letters suggest impropriety [illegible] now that it was impossible [illegible] not to keep those letters. I [illegible] not be so silly as to deny [illegible]. They meant too much to me.

"I [illegible] that the past [illegible] years of my life have been hollow and dark. We [illegible] have been.

"I was sick—nervous prostration—while Mr. Rapp was in [illegible] and his letters were very dear, very sweet, very beautiful. I am but a woman. I stole nothing that Schumann-Heink possessed. I have nothing to regret, but I have much to [illegible] forgetting is possible.

"I [illegible] not forget, I fear, nor shall I forgive. I shall hold her up to the world [illegible] How? When? All [illegible] all in good time."

[illegible] to which she stooped to get the evidence she desired to [illegible] This paragon of womanhood, this model mother bribed the [illegible] daughter of Mrs. Schmidt [illegible] the Home street [illegible] to tell lies. Let reason [illegible] Now even was [illegible] wrong [illegible] know.

"Madame Schumann-Heink was so [illegible] of divorcing Mr. Rapp that she turned to every end to drive him [illegible] compromising position. She [illegible] fierce streams of invective upon him if he as so much as glanced at a woman in the street. She made life unbearable for him and sought [illegible] to drive him [illegible] the evidence, but he was not [illegible]. He was too noble, too upright. While she acted thus he retired quietly and bowed his head to the storm.

IRISH CLANS REFUSE TO LET BRYAN TALK

The Irish [illegible] the Ancient Order of Hibernians [illegible] the [illegible] rally at Kennywood Park [illegible] Pittsburgh [illegible] a member of the [illegible] Board [illegible] friend of Mr. Bryan, the Secretary of State was invited to be the [illegible] speaker. Mr. Bryan went to considerable trouble in rearranging his future dates so as to appear. He did not know that the invitation was not official.

When it was learned that the Secretary of State had been invited and had accepted, it is said there was a bitter outburst of resentment on the part of the leaders of the Irish Societies. The resentment was occasioned by what the Democratic leaders declared was the officious and impertinent interference of the administration [illegible] Pennsylvania's political affairs.

A CAMP FIRE STORY

"Say, Bunkie," said an army regular to his tentmate down under the Southern [illegible] on the Rio Grande, "why is it that Taps is so often the signal for [illegible] to take something out of that [illegible]?"

"What [illegible] reminds me it's time to take Taps," replied Bunkie. "I was told that [illegible] the poisonous waste out of my system and avoided constipation by using Taps I'd never report at Sick [illegible] and I never have. No matter how [illegible] I feel at night I always have a good morning at 'Reveille' after I take Taps."

Not a violent purge, but a highly efficient laxative which gently assists Nature, acting beneficially on the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood, the demand for "Taps" increases amazingly everywhere immediately they are known.

Get a trial box at your druggist's to-day. "Taps" is in tablet form for "Grown-Ups." "Taps-Jr" is a milder chocolate candy laxative for the kiddies.

approach to a democracy which prevails in any country in the present stage of human development.

Q. 4. Will the A-B-C mediators be able to establish a stable government?

A. I doubt very much if it is possible for any individuals or any influence to establish a stable government in Mexico without the intervention of an overwhelming power like the United States

Q. 5. If the Americans thought it necessary to take Vera Cruz, why did they stop right there? What caused the halt? Germans cannot understand this peculiar indecision.

A. In this connection it is sufficient to say that the action of the Administration at Vera Cruz is an indication, not so much of its policy, as of its lack of policy in regard to Mexico.

Perhaps President Wilson thought that his demonstration of force would compel President Huerta to resign. Such an opinion shows a complete lack of understanding of the man that Wilson has to do with. Huerta may not have much moral character, but he certainly has courage, decision and determination in abundance In this respect he stands in strong contrast to one or two of our leading public officials who profess much moral character, but are rather deficient in these other qualities.

Q. 6. Do you think Carranza and Villa will be able to establish a stable government after Huerta should be eliminated?

A. I doubt if any of the contending factions will establish a stable government by themselves. If Carranza and Villa had the complete support of the United States, they might be able to establish a stable government, but I do not see how that complete support could be rendered them without complications that would necessitate eventual intervention. Villa is the strongest man in Mexico, the most powerful personality. As a general he is a genius. As a politician, he is very shrewd and very able. But he is absolutely ruthless. I think that he might establish an unopposed government in Mexico, but it would be by the elimination of all opponents. This method the United States could no more consistently support than it could the violence of Huerta.

Questions 7 and 8. Is there a strong sentiment in the United States for the annexation of Mexico?

Do you think the United States will have to interfere, after all, to establish order?

Answers. There is a strong sentiment in the United States looking toward the enforcement of peace and civilized conditions in Mexico. Mexico is a country immediately adjoining ours. Our citizens have great interests there, and a great number live, or did live, and conduct business in Mexico. The complete anarchy there, lasting for several years, has been injurious to the interests of our country as a whole, and disastrous and destructive to the lives and property of our citizens in Mexico. General Sherman said "War is hell." But anarchy is also hell. In fact, anarchy is worse than war, as it is more protracted and more wholly unregulated by the rules and restrictions of civilized warfare. A great many Americans have been murdered, some have been tortured and burned to death, American women have been violated, American children have been slain, many things have happened worse than anything that could happen in war

The citizens of the United States are convinced that these conditions have been allowed to prevail too long, that the United States has been too tolerant, not to say negligent, of this intolerable situation, that our government has not performed its duty to its citizens in Mexico, to its citizens at home; that it has not performed its obligations to society and civilization. Our people believe that our government should have intervened before, that it should intervene now, that it should act definitely and decisively; that it should exercise the ordinary functions of any government, especially those first and fundamental functions which involve the protection of the lives and the property of its citizens. Our people believe that it is time to put an end to the anarchical conditions prevailing in Mexico. We believe that the necessity for intervention has been clearly and conclusively demonstrated. We cannot tell as yet whether the necessity for annexation is equally urgent. I am convinced, however, that the majority of our people would be willing to go the full length of annexation, if this should prove the best solution of the problem. We do not regard annexation as oppression. New territory is brought into the United States, not as a subject colony, but as an integral and essential part of the territory of the United States, and also of the government of the United States. Our people would consider it a privilege for any country to belong to the greatest social, political and economic organization in the world—the United States of America. Any country is enormously benefited by such powerful and improving association. California once belonged to Mexico. Texas once belonged to Mexico, and others of our States also. The people of these States would not be willing, under any consideration, to go back under Mexican government Not only would the citizens of United States ancestry object to such a transfer, but the Mexicans now residing in these States would be equally unwilling to return to the government or misgovernment of Mexico. I personally think that annexation would be a probable outcome of intervention, and a highly desirable outcome, both for Mexico and the United States.

Q. 9. How long would it take and how many men would be necessary?

A. If we should be compelled now to intervene in Mexico, I think the task would be more difficult than it would have been a few months ago. In the past few months the United States has done more to strengthen the Mexican forces than it has done to strengthen its own forces. It has probably allowed more arms and ammunition to be supplied to the various factions of the Mexican soldiery than it has provided for its own. If we should proceed to invade Mexico now, every bullet which our government has supplied or allowed to be supplied to the contending Mexican armies would be aimed at an American soldier's heart. Fortunately, the Mexican aim is bad. Fortunately, the Mexican government is not as effective in the employment of armament as our government has been in the supply of it. Fortunately, our government cannot supply men to Mexico, and Mexico cannot provide the same quality of fighting men that we would send into Mexico. War is not merely a matter of guns, but of the kind of men behind the guns

I believe that if the United States should invade Mexico it would have but little difficulty in occupying and completely pacifying the country. No more difficulty than it has had in our first Mexican war, when our armies were also handicapped by an undecided and dilatory Administration.

I feel sure, however, that the attack on Mexico City from Vera Cruz would be exceedingly difficult. The country in that section is such a succession of precipitous slopes and profound chasms that a small force could hold back a very large one, if sufficient time had been given to fortify the passes. Such time, unhappily, has been given. To my mind, the best way to invade Mexico would be to transfer our navy through the Panama Canal, which is about to be opened, to the Pacific Coast, and to advance our troops on Guadalajara from Manzanillo. It would be an advantage to have our navy on the Pacific Coast, because the only possible assistance that could come to Mexico from the outside would come from Japan, and if such aid were offered we would then be in a position to intercept it

Q. 10. If the United States should continue to keep their hands off, would the European Powers sit by without protecting the interests of their countrymen in Mexico?

A. If our government should continually neglect, not only to perform its duties to its own citizens, but should also fail to recognize the obligations to other nations imposed upon us by the assertion and acceptance of the Monroe Doctrine, then naturally the European Powers would eventually be compelled to repudiate the exploded Monroe Doctrine and maintain their own rights in the Western Hemisphere, regardless of the empty declarations of a doctrine made impotent by our indifference and incapacity. Such a situation, however, will never arise. The next President of the United States will be a man and an American, a worthy successor of Washington and Jefferson, of Madison and Monroe, of Jackson and Lincoln. The people of this country are patriotic and progressive—aggressive, if you please. At least, they are vigorous and virile, courageous and capable. They have had enough of pusillanimous pedagogues and vainglorious visionaries. They have had enough of unpatriotic and impractical theorists, whose idea of courtesy to foreign peoples is disloyalty to our own. They have had enough of anaemic students of the outgrown past and unbalanced idealists of an impossible future. Our people desire and need a modern man, a man of flesh and blood, of heart and brain, a man of patriotic sentiment and practical achievement, a man who lives in the present and who understands the conditions and requirements, the aims, the aspirations, the activities, the actualities of today. America abounds in such men. We have drawn the one blank in the lottery of our politics. Let us be thankful at least that it is out of the box. Hereafter, our Presidents without question and without condition will uphold the principles of the Monroe Doctrine, will vindicate the honor and dignity of our country and re-establish at home and throughout the world our prosperity, our power and our prestige.

The Vossische Zeitung is one of the best known and most frequently quoted newspapers in all Europe. It is one of a group controlled by the Ullstein family, the largest newspaper and book publishing house in Germany. Dr. Franz Ullstein, one of the active partners, made a tour of America a little more than a year ago to study newspaper production in America. In his office, where the Vossische Zeitung, Morgen-Post and Zeit-am-Mittag are published, he has prominently displayed the motto, "Remember the Women and Children," an indication of the progressive policy of his famous group of publications.

Baker testified thus: He was standing in front of a Washington street clothing store. Assner asked if he wished to buy a suit. Baker said he did. Assner gave him a Suffolk Clothing Company card. Assner wrote his name on the back. On March 7 Baker went to the address [illegible] found Assner and bought for [illegible] a suit marked $25. HOW AMERICAN SUFFRAGISTS VIEW ENGLAND'S "LET MILITANTS DIE" ATTITUDE

MRS. H. M. J. WOOD.

Mrs. Harriette M. Johnston Wood: "Let one woman die of starvation in a British prison, and the women of the world would invade Great Britain in such numbers that the cause of woman's suffrage would be won there in no time. Thousands of women are ready to become martyrs."

MRS. O. H. P. BELMONT.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont: "The attitude of clergy toward suffragettes is exactly on a par with policy pursued by them when dealing with Joan of Arc, whom they have since seen fit to canonize and enroll on the Church's calendar as one of the elect."

MISS MARCIA MEAD.

Miss Marcia Mead: "Personally I believe that militancy is the only method by which suffrage will make any headway in England. After all, many of the reforms and radical movements made by men in England did not take place absolutely free from rioting and bloodshed."

MISS ALBERTA HILL

Miss Alberta Hill: "If this step is carried out it will put British manhood back one hundred years. I cannot believe for a moment that they would dare so outrage public feeling. 'Die and rot in jail.' Why, that does not smack of twentieth century methods, but rather of the mediaeval ages."

Nat Herreshoff was [illegible] Resolute, and from a [illegible] with him at Sandy Hook before the boat left for the starting line the seventy-year-old designer of the Bristol boat showed himself full [illegible] confident to put over another win.

Mr. Herreshoff's advice was taken by both Skipper Adams and Bob [illegible] for he not only designed the [illegible] but he built, rigged [illegible] sails for the craft.

At [illegible] o'clock the Resolute, [illegible] club topsail, mainsail and single headsail, was tacking about Ambrose Channel lightship. The winner of yesterday's race seemed to [illegible] the brisk westerly breeze and was at times well down on the side [illegible] clear white sails could be plainly seen from the shore, and they [illegible] perfectly.

Roxbury Friends Out in Force

HONORS FOR SOX STAR.

Harold Janvrin is going to have his day out at Fenway Park on July 11. A committee of ten, all sand lot friends of the only Boston boy on either Boston team, have taken up the matter with President Lannin of the Red Sox and everything is satisfactory. A whole section of the grandstand will be reserved on the occasion. It is expected that over 1,000 friends of the Roxbury boy will form in line and march to the ball grounds. The parade will be led by the Mission Church Field Band.

WILLIAMS MAY CAUSE SHIFT IN DAVIS CUP TEAM

R. Norris Williams, 2d, the brilliant [illegible] cup player and Harvard [illegible] admits that he is [illegible] this Spring.

[illegible] recently the international [illegible] the defence of the [illegible] cup communicated with Dr. Sumner Hardy, the national committeeman on the Pacific Coast to the effect that Maurice E. McLaughlin and the other California players must arrange their plans to reach New York at an early date and not remain over for competition in the Pacific Coast championships.

One reason for this, Chairman George [illegible] Adee declared, was that Williams was not showing his last [illegible] and therefore there was possibility of an entire reconstruction of the [illegible] defence plans.

"Yes, I admit that my game this spring has been off," said Williams [illegible] at Harvard for study and not [illegible] My studies [illegible] the greater part of [illegible] this Spring and accordingly [illegible] has suffered, as I have [illegible] time to use the courts.

"The other tournaments that I will enter [illegible] will be conducted in Westchester, N. Y., Seabright, N. J., and at the Longwood courts."

BRAVES READY FOR PIRATES TO BREAK OUT

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

If the Pirates [illegible] for the past [illegible] lost ten straight. We [illegible] see very [illegible] out [illegible] on [illegible] but at that they looked as though they had a lot of [illegible] power [illegible] around ready to start some[illegible].

Whatever else they know or do not know, the men under Stallings [illegible] wait out a pitcher. So get [illegible] if you expect to go much [illegible] this town, Freddie.

The Braves [illegible] Hull [illegible] due to the guns this afternoon for the second [illegible] engagement with the Pirates. As to who does the aiming for said pirates the Braves do not care if they [illegible] keep up the record of bullseyes scored in the opening fight.

A pretty good sized crowd saw the game yesterday. Maybe [illegible] of them went up to the park to see Honus Wagner. The old boy is well worth seeing as [illegible] as one has afternoons [illegible] to spare. He is apparently as active as ever and almost a whole team himself.

With a few [illegible] the crowds will be going to Walpole street in old time fashion. Boston is kind to baseball this year. The Red Sox have had splendid attendances at Fenway Park and there is only one thing that keeps the people away from the old grounds and that is the sorry showing made thus far by the Braves. But the games played here since the team returned from the West have showed that there is more strength there than the record tells.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

BIG SCHMIDT had quite a lively day on and around first base. The Baltimore butcher, according to Stallings, is very slow to come around, but judging from yesterday's play he has arrived. Certainly no livelier man has been seen at the first sack on the South End grounds [illegible] some time. And no one has played the bag better than he did in the first clash with the Pirates.

• • •

THE Braves dislike Umpire Rigler so much that they spell his name [illegible] on the [illegible] They have it Rig-[illegible]

• • •

BIG SCHMIDT got in the game on the very first play. Kelly, the Pirate, dribbled a grounder which Rudolph got to and threw a trifle to the left of Schmidt. The big fellow reached over and took the throw and a second later Kelly crashed into him. The Pirate bounded off as though he had run into a monument of hard [illegible] and fell to the ground. Schmidt acted as though he was not aware that anything had hit him. Kelly gazed at the big fellow a moment and walked off in wonderment.

• • •

TO wind up the Pirates' half of the first Konetchy laced a grounder at Maranville. The Rabbit took plenty of time for his throw and when he cut loose the chuck was hard and high and wide. Big Schmidt stuck out one hand and with one foot [illegible] the bag gathered in the ball for a swell play. Besides these stunts the Bruid gnagtan fielded several hot grounders in fine style and acted like a million dollars throughout the afternoon.

• • •

AT bat Schmidt was a little late in getting started, but he finished at full speed. In the seventh he [illegible] a single which scored a run and in the eighth he drove a [illegible] to left centre which Carey, by fast running, barely got to. Fat [illegible] fell, so the big fellow gets credit for a three bagger which also scored a tally.

• • •

THE Braves pounded out eleven hits and every one of them counted in the eleven runs scored. Not one was wasted. This is quite remarkable.

• • •

WHAT the Braves did at bat to drown the Pirates:
DUGEY—Struck out, grounded to Mowrey, singled to left.
GILBERT—Grounded to Konetchy, home run to centrefield.
EVERS—Grounded [illegible] Viox, base on [illegible] popped to Viox [illegible]
MURRAY—[illegible] third base [illegible]
MANN—[illegible]
SCHMIDT—[illegible] Mowrey, grounded to Viox [illegible] tripled to left-[illegible]
[illegible] to Wagner [illegible] to Kelly, Wagner.
GOWDY—Base on balls, grounded to Wagner, fly to Carey, base on balls.
RUDOLPH—Grounded to Viox, [illegible] Kelly, base on [illegible] bunt to O'Toole.

• • •

H[illegible] mighty punch [illegible] up in the sixth [illegible] and two down. But [illegible] his number, keeping high and outside. Hyatt struck out.

• • •

W[illegible] to our city, Kid [illegible] You look young [illegible] That 3,001st base [illegible] yours was a beauty, too.

• • •

THE Rabbit may be superstitious. If he is there is no chance to see him in a clean pair of pants until he stops making hits. The little fellow is wearing on the field the most disreputable looking nether garment that ever caught the eye of a laundry sales manager. The Rabbit's pants could be [illegible] with comfort to himself and gratification to the spectators, but there is no chance while he is making four safe hits and a [illegible] fly in a ball game, unless, of course, the State Board of Health takes a hand.

• • •

MARTY O'TOOLE looks as though he Wintered well, but the South Framingham lad still has a tendency to pitch 'em away from the plate. He issued five passes in the four rounds he pitched.

DETROIT SURE SOX HAVE HIT NON-STOP GAIT

DETROIT, Mich., June 11.—The [illegible] of [illegible] were recalled [illegible] following the defeat of the Tigers by the Red Sox yesterday, 8 to 2, and Tiger fans were wondering if the Sox were going to keep their championship form for the rest of the series here. Yesterday's game was [illegible] opportunities accepted by the Red Sox and booted by the Tigers.

If ever a perfect [illegible] base [illegible] aggressiveness [illegible] the face of [illegible] The Tigers [illegible] very [illegible] outfielder [illegible] when they got [illegible] of the field. When they got on the bases they were bewildered.

The Red Sox [illegible] took advantage of every opportunity and had their game won with a comfortable margin even before they broke loose [illegible] in the eighth for four runs.

SCOTT THE BIG GUN FOR SOX

Ray Collins is one of the southpaws whom Manager Jennings fears. When he heard that [illegible] was [illegible] to pitch he decided to [illegible] for slugger [illegible] recently. If he had had the [illegible] good days the two [illegible] would have been [illegible] As it was the Red Sox [illegible] a gala day.

Everett Scott was the [illegible] for the Sox. The [illegible] making his first [illegible] Detroit looked like a [illegible] He walked the first time [illegible] drove Cobb back for a long second time.

The third time up he [illegible] so far over Tyrus' head that [illegible] come on it, standing with [illegible] even trying to complete the [illegible]

Scott made the longest hit [illegible] on Navin Field. He drove [illegible] farthest corner of the field and was rounding third when Cobb [illegible] the ball. He later drove a [illegible] to Crawford and [illegible] a lucky Texas league double.

JANVRIN ALSO STARRED

Young Janvrin was [illegible] but very timely with [illegible] There were two [illegible] first [illegible] until the [illegible]

When [illegible] scoring Speaker and Lewis [illegible] eighth the entire game went [illegible] the club batted around getting [illegible] hits in the melee.

Tris Speaker was the [illegible] of the day. He pulled the most spectacular catch ever seen [illegible] Field. With Burns on third [illegible] Stanage lined to the [illegible] Speaker dashed back, jumped [illegible] the air and pulled the ball down [illegible] gloved hand. He was so far [illegible] Burns trotted home with [illegible] making no attempt to [illegible]

Russia's Persecution of the Jews Fully Exposed

The Baron was suavity's self. "Don't be upset, Mr. Seaton. Give me the card. I'll send a message and he'll leave you undisturbed."

"Just a second. This is such a splendid chance of seeing the workings of your famous police," said Rolfe, his journalistic habit of mind leading him to a story led nowhere else.

"Why should Mr. Seaton be annoyed, though?" asked the Baron so smoothly that his nephew, Nikolai Rostov, wondered if any one on earth could guess that here was the Russian diplomatic service at its best.

"But he can't refuse to see them, can he? Your police have the right to enter anywhere," urged Rolfe.

Marya Varenka sat at the old secretary and smiled sadly. The man who had told her but a few moments before that he loved her was now giving her to her approaching doom.

"True," said the Baron. "But this man doesn't know that I'm here or he wouldn't dare to break in on a social gathering of my friends."

"Why let him know?" You can withdraw into the background and he need never know you are here, unless you object to your system being studied so closely."

"Object! I am delighted. I rejoice at the unexpected opportunity this gives you. It is only for Mr. Seaton to give the word."

"Oh, do, father!" cried Margery.

Marya smiled at the wanton bitterness of fate. Perhaps her crisis might have passed but for these two who cared most for her—and they were urging on her doom.

"It will be something to talk about when we get back to London. Do let him in. We'd all love it—wouldn't we, Marya?"

Margery ran impulsively to Marya's side and threw a warm, loving arm about her. Marya turned her head and forced a sad little smile, though her eyes were burning with tears that she dared not let brim to the surface.

"Yes," said Marya Varenka, preparing for her doom.

"I don't like this idea of a policeman coming to my rooms. There's no reason for it. It's likely to be such a bore for the Baron, too. A man likes to get away from shop some of the time," protested Seaton, tenacious of his point of view to the last.

THE EXPOSE

"Father, you're acting very queerly," said a pert little voice. "Have you been doing anything wrong?"

"Margery!" cried the outraged parent.

"Well, if he has, we promise to see him safely out of it—don't we, Uncle," laughed Nikolai Rostov.

But Marya knew that there was no one to see her safely out of the danger that menaced.

"Show Mr. Petrov Paviac up," commanded Mr. Seaton to the soft-footed waiter.

The Baron was hidden away in the recesses of a winged chair in front of the fireplace—lest this member of the "Okrana" fear his chief so much that his actions be impeded and unnatural.

"Once an officer enters here I cannot interfere—I dare not interfere—not even if I wished to spoil your fun," warned the Baron just as Petrov Paviac entered the room.

He was the man who had followed Marya Varenka to the very threshold of the Seaton apartment. The girl shuddered as she heard his stealthy step and sensed again the presence that had so terrified her.

The man bowed with military precision—when he spoke his voice carried a sinister combination of French culture grafted on the harsher Russian pronunciation of the English language.

"Excellency," said he obsequiously to the rich Englishman. But his daring Cossack eye roved from one to the other with due appraisal in the glance—and it finally rested on Marya Varenka, who had not turned at his entrance. "Have I the honor of speaking to Mr. Seaton?"

"Yes. What can I do for you?"

"As you have seen by this card, I come from the Okrana, the Secret Service. I am sorry, Mr. Seaton—my excuses for this intrusion. It is not pleasant, I know."

"A policeman is not a usual guest at an afternoon tea—my friends are all astonished. I should like you to come to your business without any delay. I confess I am at a loss to understand the reason of this visit. . . Beastly bore," said the Englishman, regretting this interruption to an afternoon of pleasant sociability. But Marya Varenka—she knew bitterly well that this episode was not to be merely a "beastly bore."

Paviac turned suddenly and looked at Marya from steely eyes.

"I should like to ask Marya Varenka a few question."

The girl had felt that this was imminent—that only seconds could be measured before it must come. And yet when come it did it found her unprepared. Even in the shadow of the chair the condemned criminal dreams of reprieve. Perhaps the girl had thought some miracle could yet save her even when Petrov Paviac had crossed the threshold of the room and her life.

"Marya!" cried Margery.

ON THE RACK

The girl rose slowly and faced them all. A subtle change seemed coming over her. The burden of Russian hopelessness in the face of unconquerable odds seemed blotting out all her young brightness of vitality and charm.

"Miss Varenka is well known to all of us," cried Julian Rolfe, with quick American chivalry.

"No doubt—it is only a mater of form—please." The man kept looking at Marya Varenka, and as in answer to a summons, the girl came slowly forward.

"You are Marya Varenka?" asked Paviac.

"Yes." She just breathed it.

"What was the name of your last employer?"

"The Princess Mirskaya."

"What was the nature of your employment?"

"Governess."

"Look here," cried Rolfe, crossing to the menacing figure of the policeman, "Miss Varenka brought credentials from the Princess Mirskaya that were quite satisfactory to Mr. Seaton."

"Quite," said Seaton, succinctly. He was sitting at ease finding this domiciliary visit quite as boresome as he had expected. Count Rostov stood puffing a long Russian cigarette and amusedly watching his uncle's twitching profile where he could view it above the high-backed chair in the firelight glow. Petrov Paviac and the girl were almost as alone as if marooned on an ocean island—and only Rolfe and Margery seemed near enough in interest to be ships that might speak them in passing.

"Where is this reference?" went on Paviac with the implacability of doom.

"I'm sorry. It is at my room in the—in the Karen Skya." It seemed as if Marya's weak voice would not carry her stumbling articulation to the policeman's ears.

THE PASSPORT

"I knew where your room is, Marya Varenka. It is a pity—that you have not your reference here. It is important."

"Mr. Seaton has seen it," explained Rolfe again with impatience.

"But we must see it, sir. The Okrana must see it," undulated the man's accented voice. "Is your passport also at home—Marya Verenka?"

"No—I have it in my bag."

"I would like to see it, please."

That "please" was terrifying in its menacingly scornful pretext at manners.

The girl crossed to her door and Paviac followed her stumbling figure with the bloodhound tenacity of the Okrana.

"Say, this is the—lim-it!" breathed Rolfe.

"We all know Miss Varenka," said her employer in his stateliest tones.

"Pardon, Mr. Seaton—We do not!"

"You're simply fishing," cried the journalist helplessly to Paviac, wishing devoutly that he were a member of New York's more easily understandable — and reachable — police force. "Why should an innocent lady be submitted to an indignity like this?"

"To prove she IS an innocent lady."

"Then the police look upon every one unknown to them as suspicious characters? Is that it?" challenged Rolfe. "You might as well suspect me."

Sharply his challenge was accepted. "I do! You have given me every reason to."

In sheer impotence Rolfe staggered to the settee. He flung his muscular hands of useless power to a throbbing head and muttered with impious fervor.

Marya Varenka crept back into the room like a poor little shadow of the girl that had been. She gave her passport to Paviac. He seized it suspiciously and read it silently while she droned out her sad little defence:

"I come here every morning and remain until I return to my room in the Karen Skya at night to sleep. I go nowhere. I have no friends. That is the life I lead, and it was the same before I came here. That's all I have to tell you."

It sounded to Rolfe as pitiful a story of wasted youth and energy as he had thought could be. Margery winced at the accepted loneliness of the life of this girl no older than her happy, petted, care-free self.

"Are you willing to make your statement under oath to my chief?" persisted Petrov Paviac.

"Yes."

"Do you consider the Princess Mirskaya an honest lady?"

"Certainly—of the very highest integrity—I have never suggested anything else—I—"

A LITTLE TOO MUCH

"Do you think she would say the same of you?" thundered Petrov Paviac.

"Say, look here—" said Rolfe, recovering from one blow and preparing to stand up to another.

"If you please." The Okrana spoke with the authoritative dignity of power. Then the pitiless "Third degree" in its Russian equivalent went on. "The Princess Mirskaya kept two governesses, didn't she?"

The girl was silent.

"Didn't she?"

"Yes."

"What was the other governess' name?"

Marya hesitated.

"You remember, don't you? Look at me?"

"I'm trying to remember," she cried, flashing round at him with some of the fighting spirit of the creature at bay.

"One of the Princess Mirskaya's governesses was taken ill and left?" stated the examiner, rather than asked it.

"Yes," said a barely audible voice.

"Where did she go?"

"To—a—to—Peter—Petersbourg."

"Did you see her again?"

"Yes," whispered a voice in answer at last.

"When?"

"We shared the same room between us. Soon after she went away, and I never saw her again."

"The official records show that she died in your rooms and that her name was—Marya Varenka"——

A BREATHLESS SILENCE

There was a breathless silence—the hush of a storm gathering force to burst in death-wracking fury made the room sultry and electrical for long minutes to come.

"You took her name—her reference and her passport!" Paviac snapped out his accusation.

"You were never at the Princess Mirskaya's!" questioned Nikolai Rostov.

The Girl You Love

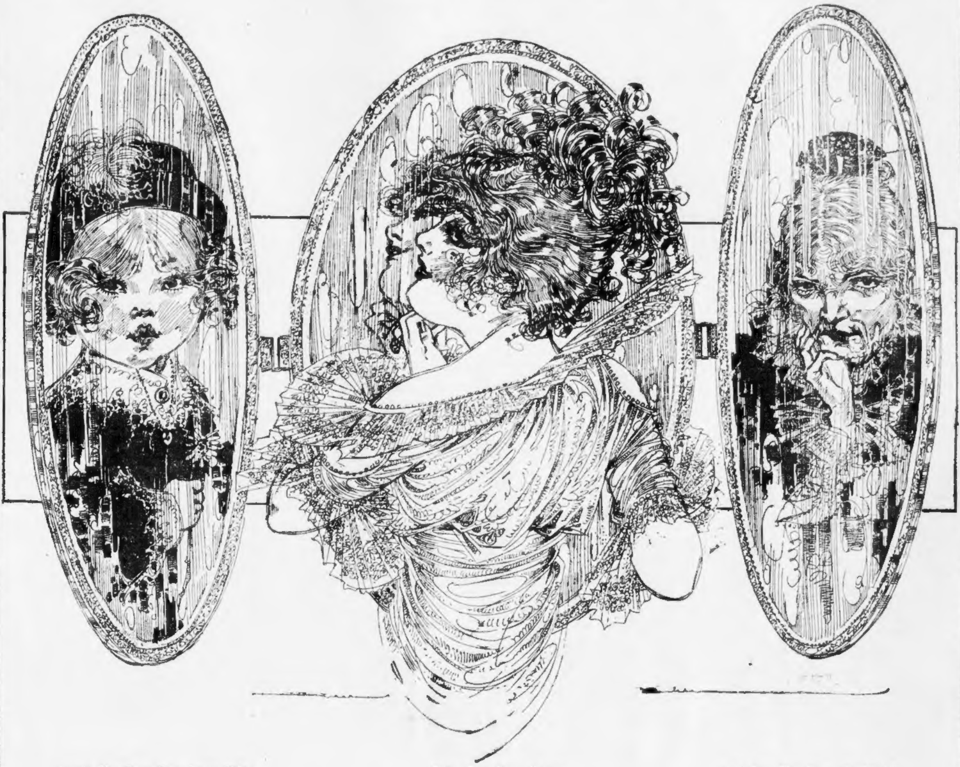
BY NELL BRINKLEY



Could She Ever Have Been This? This Girl You Love. And Can She Ever Be This?

YOU chaps who are swimming strongly in the swift, sweet tide of love, the blue sea of Romance carrying you on its deep-breathing bosom, the white clouds of Dreams like the lace at HER throat drifting high over you, have you ever put in your hand a dingy little picture of a funny child, a funny little child in an old-fashioned beaver-bonnet with a little "tip" curling over its brim, a velvet coat buttoned over her fat little tummy, a "property" flower clutched in her scared little hand, a tiny heart-locket gleaming on her tiny chest, a faded lace collar up around her flower-stem neck, and a pair of staring, dark, pixie eyes under satiny, plastered-down tow-hair; have you ever had this dingy, scratched, warped-by-the-year photograph thrust into your hands and heard the voice of the girl whom you love breathing warmly and wistfully over your shoulder, "That's ME!" Then you've thought many things, if you have. Can this tall, splendid girl with high-coifed hair, with the broad, flat shoulders, the language of womanhood in her eyes and on her lips, with the long, elegant hand with its single ring you gave her splintering into light on her finger, the quick, alert brain, the passion of living around her like a scarlet garment, ever, EVER have been this little, little child? The only things left, it seems, that look back at you now as you slew your head about and search the face brooding smilingly over your shoulder, are the pixie-eyes and the deep dimples, honey-filled. They are still there—but the quaint little "tip," and the tight-buttoned coat, the fat little hand and its stiff white flower, and the baby chin and brow, are all with the things that never come back, crumpled flowers, and memories, and the little boy that used to be! And then I think you reach around in a passion of jealousy and tenderness, trying to hold, in the grown tall girl, that little child that was. Trying to hold that other one she will be, a faded little woman with the splendor of the dark eyes set like gems in a network of wrinkles, the face still holding some of the crab-apple blossom coloring, the dimples sunk away into furrows, the baby-hand and the slim-girl hand worn away into a fragile morsel of bones, the hair again plastered down and satin-smooth, and the tiny chest in lace and velvet, like that first little child.

The girl you love looks into a three-ovaled mirror and there you will see her, if you peer close, that little funny child that was, the glorious thing she is, and the elderly person she will be.

And in your arms, if you are wise, you will remember that you hold all three—for in her ways and her heart and eyes, if you look and understand, you will find the little child. And you must try, if you are VERY wise, to keep that little child as long, as long as can be—to keep that other one with sunken lips and eyes as far, as far away as may be!

CHAPTER THREE

Jack Recovers His Mind

AFTER Langdon's death Carl Roberts had his way with Mrs. Langdon. It seemed to her like a lucky providence that had called her husband away just when she had lost her love for him, and she married Roberts as soon as she could in keeping with her widow's weeds. Jack had been placed in an asylum directly after the funeral, he was too dangerous a character to have any longer at liberty, and, although he had been found guilty of murder in the first degree, nothing could be done with him on account of his insanity.

Two years later found things rather different with all three of the people intimately concerned. Carl Roberts having gained possession of Phillip Langdon's huge wealth, had become wildly dissipated, his love for his wife did not prevent many entanglements with other women, and Mrs. Langdon was wretchedly unhappy most of the time. Jack Langdon seemed to be the only person who had been benefited in that time, for he had entirely recovered his mind, and as he had no recollection of his brother's murder, he could not understand why he was left in the asylum when he was well enough to leave.

His discontent with his surroundings was soon brought to the notice of the superintendent, who examined Jack and found him perfectly normal. He therefore dispatched a hasty note to Roberts, asking to see him in regard to the patient's release. Roberts received the note with more or less perturbation, but finally, deciding to brave it out, he called with his wife at the asylum and asked to see Jack Langdon.

Mrs. Roberts asked to see Jack alone, she was resolved on notifying him of the fact that he was a murderer, and was curious to know just how he would take the fact. Roberts walked in the grounds with the superintendent, while she went upstairs, but as Jack rose eagerly and advanced toward her, she drew back coldly and handed him the newspaper with the flaming headlines of the murder emblazoned all over the front. Jack took the paper wonderingly, unable to understand his sister-in-law's attitude, but when he read of his brother's murder he dashed the paper to the ground and indignantly repudiated it.

"Why can't I remember?" he moaned pacing the floor in his anguish and dashing his fists against his forehead as though frantic at not being able to remember. Mrs. Langdon regarded him coldly for she still believed him guilty and incapable of remembering what he had done. And then suddenly in his wild pacing across the floor he happened to glance out of the window. Roberts stood just below. With a wild rush of forgotten incidents that long ago day suddenly flashed across the man's mind. They had stood together in the arbor, some one had pushed a pistol into his, Jack's hand; it was all clear now, all plain as day.

Dragging the frightened Mrs. Roberts to the window he pointed wildly down at the two men in the grounds.

"There is the man who shot Philip," he said, his eyes wild and staring at the horror of the discovery. But Mrs. Roberts looked Jack up and down in calm insolence as she laughed unbelievingly.

"That man?" she queried, her voice high and shrill, "why that man is my husband!"

Jack started back.

"So you married him," he said, hopelessly. "Oh, I see his little game," but Mrs. Roberts with a wild shriek of fright made for the door, and as she reached it, in rushed a crowd of attendants, who hastily bound Jack. After this he was thought to have suffered a relapse, and once more Carl Roberts was safe, although he had had a narrow escape this time.

Up-to-the Minute Jokes

There had been a heavy downfall of rain, and the railway district manager telegraphed along different sections of the line as follows:

"Send full particulars of the flood."

An agent on a particular section of the line where no flooding had taken place was greatly puzzled by this message, and, thinking it a joke, he wired back as follows:

"Look in the Book of Genesis."

George, who lived in London, happened to meet the vicar of his native parish the other day, and eagerly asked after some of his old acquaintances.

"And old Mr. Jones?" he asked. "Have you seen him lately?"

The vicar shook his head. "I shall never see him again," he answered, slowly. "Mr. Jones has gone to heaven."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WEN Pa caim home last nite he had a bird cage with him & in the cage there was four littel chickens. Now doant begin asking questuns, he sed to Ma & me, until I have these littel things in just the right part of the room, ware thay can get lite & heat enuff.

Who toald you thay was canaries, sed Ma. You wud beleeve anything any man tells you if the man has anything to sell.

I have not sed that thay are canaries, sed Pa. Doant talk out of yure turn. I know perfeckly well what these are. Thay are littel chickens, Pa sed. Two of them is Plimuth Rocks & two of them is Minorkys. Thay are vary kind & intelligent breeds, sed Pa, & I feel sure that I can reer the four of these into useful henhood.

For goodness sake, sed Ma, you can't raise poultry in a flat, & in a bird cage at that.

That reemains to be seen, sed Pa. I am firmly of the opinyun that I can. Certingly it is worth the trial. I am going to care for these helpless littel things myself, every day, morning & nite. Neether you nor littel Bobbie will be asked to put yureselfs out in the least. I am going to watch thare habits, sed Pa, & try to lern what thare tastes are, so that I can keep them happy & contented till thay get to be useful hens, laying four eggs a day for us, two for me, one for you & one for littel Bobbie. I think this experience of mine, sed Pa, is going to go far toward sol-ving the high cost of living.

I think you are losing your massive intelleck, that is what I think, sed Ma. I nevver herd of such a foolish noshun. If you try to keep them chickens in this steam heated flat, sed Ma, thay will not live. You mite as well try raising them in that gold-fish globe, sed Ma.

You can talk all you want to, sed Pa, but after these two Plimuth Rocks & two minorkys has grown up, every time one of them lays a egg she will look at you kind of reeproachful on account of the harsh words here tonite. You leeve this undertaking to me.

Who in the world told you that chickens cud be raised indoors, in a bird cage? sed Ma.

I tell you it is a idea of my own, sed Pa. As long as we cannot move out into the country to live for sum time to cum, I am determined to go in for poultry raising on a small scale rite here at home. Thare is no reeson in the wurld why it can't be done, & after I have proven the success of my theery, sed Pa, I am going to give it to the wurld, so that every poor fambly wich lives in a flat can have at leest two or three hens to keep them supplied with eggs. Then my naim will be immortal, sed Pa, & will ring down the corydors of time. Now I am going to bed, beckaus I am tired tonite. Goodnite, deer ones, sed Pa.

After Pa had gone to bed Ma sed to me Bobbie, wen you grow up, doant join any clubs if you marry. Yure deer father has been too long at the club tonite, I can see that plainly.

& this morning Ma made Pa taik the chickings rite back ware he got them. Pa sed he wud if he cud reemember ware he got them, & he promised Ma that he wud be hoam erly tonite.

MRS. THOMSON TELLS WOMEN

How She Was Helped During Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I am just 52 years of age and during Change of Life I suffered for six years terribly. I tried several doctors but none seemed to give me any relief. Every month the pains were intense in both sides, and made me so weak that I had to go to bed. At last a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I tried it at once and found much relief. After that I had no pains at all and could do my housework and shopping the same as always. For years I have praised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me, and shall always recommend it as a woman's friend. You are at liberty to use my letter in any way."—MRS. THOMSON, 649 W. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for women's ills known.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular as to price today and without response to anything in the news whether good or bad. Early in the afternoon in New York declines included Canadian Pacific ⅝, Reading ¼, New Haven ¼, American Telephone ⅛, American Can ¼, Steel ⅛, American Smelting ⅛, Northern Pacific ⅛ and Union Pacific ⅛. Southern Pacific was up ⅛ and Lehigh Valley ⅛. Missouri Pacific, Amalgamated and Baltimore & Ohio were unchanged.

In Boston there were proportionately more issues to show gains. Elevated was up ¼, United Fruit 1¼, Calumet & Arizona ¼, Granby ½, and Shoe ⅛. Boston & Maine was off ⅝ and New Haven ⅛.

OPENED WITH FEW CHANGES.

When markets opened there were few changes as to prices, but within a few minutes the trend took a downward course. Losses averaged very little, however. Markets were neglected by the public, and speculation is so dormant that they commanded only such attention from professionals as their individual interests demanded. Traders look for a long period of dulness. After the Eastern rate case is settled there will be nothing to look forward to except crops, unless something new develops. Before business began on this side Americans were irregular in London. That market was stagnant. The settlement was concluded without trouble, but there is uneasiness because of the situation at Paris.

New York gave little attention to London or anything else. Neither bears nor bulls cared to be initiative. There is no demand for stocks and few to sell. It was said that there is little likelihood of a market movement until the Interstate Commerce Commission decides the rate case. There is as much uncertainty as to when the decision will be rendered as there is to what it will be like. Some people think it may come Saturday next, others that it is to be looked for around June 20, and others that it will be held up for several weeks longer. Share transactions in New York for the first hour totalled a little more than 37,000 shares and business was on a smaller scale subsequently. Markets were almost featureless, particularly the one in Boston.

STEEL CORPORATION REPORT.

The report of the United States Steel Corporation that its unfilled orders at the end of May were 278,908 tons less than the total on April 31, was no surprise to speculators or financiers. A shrinkage had been expected. It was the poorest showing in nearly three years. Steel common stood up well under the report. Its steadiness is a tribute to the surplus, and other resources of the corporation rather than to the status of its business now. The condition of the steel industry is not good, but some people regard it more gloomily than others.

President Maben of the Sloss-Sheffield Company expects the steel trade to be dull during the Summer. "In the Fall," he said, "we will undoubtedly have a rally in all kinds of business no matter what happens, but in the event of the election of a Republican Congress business should be good."

LONDON AFTER GOLD HERE.

The most interesting event in the present movement of gold from this country to Europe is a draft made by London upon New York. The British capital has been short of yellow metal for some time. It has not been able to pile up reserves of that kind, as Paris and Berlin have done. The engagement of $250,000 in bars by the National City Bank is for London. In the first three days of this week Europeans engaged $15,750,000 in New York. Since the first of the year the total of what has been obtained by them in this country is $51,750,000—and the movement is not over. One million in coin was engaged this morning for shipment to Paris tomorrow. There is so much gold in this country and business is so dull that the exportation of a vast sum of gold has had no effect upon the money market. Under the reserve bank system about to be inaugurated there will be no trouble in obtaining funds for moving crops this coming Fall. The only thing apt to tighten money rates will be such a revival of commercial and industrial activity that business men will need a great deal more cash than they do now.

Kansas bankers estimate that its wheat crop will bring that State $100,000,000.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company has declared an extra dividend of 5 per cent. As the Interborough-Metropolitan Company owns $33,912,800 of Interborough Rapid Transit Company stock, it will receive $1,695,640 as its share of the extra disbursement.

It is getting so hard for Canadian cities or corporations to raise any more money in London for the present that it is believed the city of Montreal will go to New York to place the $7,300,000 loan it is contemplating.

The American Express Company's annual dividend rate was fixed at 6 per cent. by the directors in making the latest distribution. The company's rate for the last fiscal year was 12 per cent.

FORBES WARNS OF DANGERS IN R. R. OUTLOOK

By B. C. FORBES.

Another slab in the pathway leading to government ownership of railroads has been laid by the Supreme Court of the United States.

* * *

That is one undiscussed phase of this week's decision limiting the powers of the States in railroad regulation and placing virtually unrestricted power in the hands of the Federal body, the Interstate Commerce Commission.

* * *

Don't you see it now that it is brought to your notice?

* * *

There may be an uprising by ardent advocates of States' rights against the tendency to emasculate State railroad commissions, BUT THE TREND CANNOT BE CHECKED. IT IS ECONOMIC RATHER THAN POLITICAL.

* * *

My humble belief is that, before the final plunge into nationalization is taken, the expedient of federal incorporation of railroads will be resorted to, but that such an arrangement will not prove permanent.

* * *

Now that federal supervision has been established, federal incorporation would seem to be a logical step.

* * *

But private capital is already balking at governmental management without government responsibility, at federal power to reduce receipts without regard to expenditures. As President Ripley of the Atchison aptly remarked: "The thing cannot last."

* * *

The Wall Street Journal is angry because men of E. P. Ripley's high standing and mature experience should contribute thoughtful and thought-compelling articles on Government ownership to the AMERICAN. It devoted its chief editorial last evening to berating President Ripley and Newman Erb for choosing the Hearst newspapers for giving to the world their conclusions on such a subject. Perhaps these men, as well as a constantly increasing number of their class, realize that the Hearst newspapers reach more readers and more voters in one day than all the other New York morning papers combined—and more than the Wall Street Journal reaches in a blue moon. Next time the Hearst newspapers prove more enterprising than the Wall Street organ in the latter's own field, might it not be more becoming to discuss WHAT the big men say and not squirt petty spleen at them for choosing to address voters throughout the whole country rather than the relatively small number who ever see the Wall Street sheet?

* * *

This is not the only important country in which government ownership of railroads is gradually becoming a practical issue. Most nations already own their domestic transportation systems, and now the most conspicuous oversea exception to this rule, Great Britain, has appointed a commission to consider the whole subject of railroad administration. The expectation is that this is preliminary to preparing a comprehensive plan for taking over every important line in the country.

* * *

Government ownership of railroads is in keeping with the universal trend toward co-operation and combination, toward the organization of large units to displace small ones. Underlying Monday's epochal "Shreveport decision" is this same unmistakable and irresistible economic law—the ascendency of the large over the small in the business world. In the days of stage coaches no harm would have resulted from subjecting them to control by two-score different States, but in these days of trans-continental railroads it is inevitable that control should be national. And no system of arbitrary control without regard to the consequences to the owners is likely to prove lasting.

* * *

We may or we may not relish the prospect of government ownership and administration of our vast railroad system, with its 2,000,000 employes, but if we are convinced that such a culmination is inevitable, the wise thing surely would be to devote serious study to the gigantic problem of how best to usher in the new order.

THE PEOPLE WILL OWN THE RAILROADS

Government Ownership Is No Longer a Matter of Discussion—It Is a Matter of Time

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

For a great many years this newspaper and readers of this newspaper have advocated government ownership of natural monopolies.

The day of government ownership is here, and it will begin WITH THE RAILROADS.

Government ownership of telephones and telegraphs will come—and not much later.

Ownership of the railroads by the people will be the work of THIS DAY.

The history of the last few months in the United States proves:

First, that government management of great industrial undertakings IS POSSIBLE.

Second, that the government can carry on a necessary monopoly MORE successfully than private individuals.

Third, that in the management of railroads at least government ownership is absolutely necessary to save the railroads, the stockholders and the public from boundless, shameless dishonesty inevitably leading to failure and bankruptcy.

The parcel post proves that the government can conduct efficiently, economically and profitably a great, complex public service.

While this newspaper was advocating parcel post in place of the private express company for years, the reply of the express monopolist was, "Our rates are low enough. They could not profitably be made lower. The government could not do the work we do as well or as cheaply."

Today the government does the work of carrying parcels for a quarter or less of the price charged by the express companies.

Of the latter some have gone out of business, all have reduced their charges very greatly, and all admit that competition with the government is hopeless.

And, please observe that the government runs the parcel post, the great work of distribution, without corrupting public officials, or graft or extortion.

Mr. Mellen's revelations in connection with the New Haven railroad, the robbery of stockholders, the squandering of millions unaccounted for, the bribing of public officials make every sane man know that the government must take the railroads AT ONCE.

Unquestionably there is here and there an honest and competent railroad manager.

But any thief or collection of thieves can buy control of the road that he manages, bankrupt and steal from its stockholders, while he looks on helpless.

What one gang did to the New Haven, what another gang did to the Rock Island, what a third gang did to the New York street railways, can be done to ANY railroad under private ownership. AND IT COULD NOT BE DONE TO ANY RAILROAD UNDER GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

Those who still feebly oppose government ownership of railroads say that it would be a crime to put that great responsibility, that vast expenditure "in the hands of grafting public officials."

But in the first place, it is shown in the New Haven road scandal that millions were paid out in order to corrupt New York City officials.

And the private "gentlemen" who controlled the road stole tens of millions at a time and reduced a railroad, of which the stock was selling above two hundred dollars a share, to bankruptcy and disorganization.

Even the railroad managers themselves—those that will admit the truth—say that government ownership and management of railroads is inevitable.

Mr. Mellen's story explains how gigantic fortunes are built up and railroad properties knocked down.

What is the use of talking about increasing the freight rate five per cent?

If you increased it a hundred per cent. the gang of thieves who looted the New Haven would steal every dollar and bankrupt the road anyhow.

You cannot increase freight rates or passenger rates enough to satisfy the greed of private thieves in charge of public monopolies.

The people are SICK of these big thieves, and their vast fortunes, and their bribing of officials, and their ruining of innocent investors.

They are tired of the "kings of finance" who with their ermine stripped off are shown to be unprincipled scoundrels.

The people of the United States CREATED THE RAILROADS. The railroad managers have bankrupted the railroads, robbed the stockholders, swindled the people, and their day is done.

The country does not need a railroad system managed by servile employes and looted by ruthless financiers.

If the highways of steel, like the highways of dirt and macadam, are public necessities, then they should be and will be PUBLIC PROPERTY.

There is no other solution of the question. The people will own the railroads, manage them, reduce rates instead of increasing them, and make that service as superior to the present miserable, dishonest railroad service as the present parcel post system is superior to the vanishing swindling express company method.

Government ownership of railroads NOW, and of all national monopolies within this generation—that is the demand of the intelligent citizen.

To Unload the Hampden Road on the B. & M. is Downright Robbery of the Stockholders

Certain gentlemen and financial institutions are now asking the Massachusetts Legislature to unload from their shoulders upon the poor, old Boston & Maine Railroad their investment in the Hampden Railroad.

Here is a little railroad luxury costing $250,000 a mile, without equipment and without terminals and without utility to the Boston & Maine except for Summer traffic. Here is a railroad which has cost four times as much as the average railroad in the United States per mile. Here is a railroad which Mr. Mellen himself admitted cost six or seven times as much per mile as the parallel line of the Boston & Albany. Here is a railroad which, if unloaded on the Boston & Maine, will cost the Boston & Maine something over $12,000 a mile for rental, while the Boston & Maine today pays for its leased lines only about $3,000 a mile rental, and these rentals are considered by Governor Walsh, even at $3,000 a mile, as too high. Here is a railroad built by an independent construction company with the intention of foisting it upon the Boston & Maine, and built upon such terms that the more it cost the more the company which built it would receive in profit.

In the meantime the Boston & Maine is balancing upon the brink of receivership, paying no dividends, unable to meet its current obligations as they mature, reducing its service, cutting down its trains and demanding higher rates and car fares from the people. This is the railroad that is asked to purchase or rent a monstrosity of extravagance like the Hampden right of way, for it has no engines, no cars, no stations, nothing but a roadbed and some rails so poorly imbedded in its ties as to be considered dangerous by a contractor who has built railroads in thirty-four States of the Union.

To make the tottering Boston & Maine take such a proposition on its feeble shoulders is like making a pauper run in debt for an automobile. It is nothing short of downright robbery of the stockholders of the Boston & Maine.

Undoubtedly, a good many of the gentlemen who have invested in this Hampden proposition did so honestly, BUT carelessly. No intelligent man or institution could have made a proper investigation of the conditions which surrounded the construction of this so-called railroad without being warned that it was a thing to avoid. These men are better able to stand the loss than the stockholders of the Boston & Maine and the traveling public in northern New England.

Schemes like the Hampden Railroad proposal, the American Express Company and Pullman contracts have brought the poor Boston & Maine to its present low estate.

If there are any savings banks which will lose money by careless investments in this reckless proposition, then let the depositors sue their responsible officers and trustees for negligence in making such wild investments.

It would be a very good thing for this community to give a practical demonstration of the fact that the law holds directors and other trustees liable to their stockholders and depositors for careless management of their business.

Feminist Reforms—Some of Them Are Not Worth Being Taken Seriously by Reasoning or Sensible Human Beings

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

AN Englishwoman of great brilliancy of mind, married to a brilliant man for twenty-three years, has a home in the country while her husband lives in London.

Recently she was visited by a reporter, and in the course of an interview she said:

"There are weeks when we do not even see each other. I cannot imagine that two persons can live together 365 days of the year for a lifetime without becoming horribly bored. If I had never been separated from my husband I feel sure that I could not have written the romantic love letter, really a wild letter, that I sent him this morning just before you came."

It is quite all right for this lady to express herself as happy and satisfied with conditions which have seemed to prove suitable for her own particular case and her own particular temperament.

But she has no right to assume that other people who live together under one roof, from year's end to year's end, must be "horribly bored," or that romantic love and sentiment cannot remain with them.

It is the writer's belief that occasional separations are advisable for husbands and wives, and parents and children, and brothers and sisters; for all people, in fact, who are accustomed to dwell together.

Just as the magnet seems to lose its power over the steel when the steel becomes thoroughly charged, so people are frequently affected by too constant association.

And just as removing the magnet from the steel gives it new force of attraction, so the separation of individuals will restore the magnetic influence.

Then again, it sometimes requires a perspective to fully appreciate the charms of lovely scenery, and the same can be said of the characteristics of these who are near to us; we see and appreciate their best qualities, sometimes, by separating from them.

But when we say that to keep love and romance alive in the heart we must dwell together only for brief periods of time, we express a very shallow conception of real love. There are husbands and wives who have lived, toiled, hoped, waited, played, traveled and studied together for a score or more years, and found life growing sweeter, love deeper and happiness more profound with each year. To them all the little daily happenings seem to glow with the charm of the unexpected; each morning beckons them forth to new adventures in the great wonder world of existence; and the commonplace events veil themselves in some fresh guise each day, and assume an aspect of mystery. Love reveals new depths, finds new expressions, understands the profound language of silence better and better; and so united are their lives and hearts that a brief twenty-four hours of separation necessitates a week of closer intimacy and conversation to repair the broken threads of mutual interests and pleasures.

There is no association of lovers, no romance of the honeymoon, which can compare with the varied sources of happiness and the far-reaching enjoyments of two people who have lived for more than a score of years in ever-increasing pleasure in each other's companionship.

There are many such people to be found in our midst.

The writer recalls one pair of comrade lovers, who had lived in this delightful companionship for more than fifty years, when both were summoned within a year, to pass on to other realms.

Still another who have dwelt together in ever-growing love and friendship (for such love rears its towers on the solid base of friendship) for thirty years, and still another for a decade less. Unselfish love, romantic sentiment and common-sense friendship all unite to hold these hearts in lasting affection.

The same woman, who expresses herself as believing that continual association destroys romance, says also that she believes in trial marriages. She says:

"Until love is freed from the obligation of support no man can know that he is loved for himself, no woman can be sure of the disinterestedness of her affections. I believe, of course, that every man should support his child up to the age of twenty-one.

"But love must be freed from commercialism. And in order to do this we shall have to try many experiments. One of the experiments I propose I call a novitiate of marriage. I don't use the expression novitiate as equivalent to trial marriage. If two people were to inhabit the same house, the man living with the girl's family for only a year, it would be impossible to conceal small habits, peculiarities and moods which sometimes play as great havoc with marriage as vice itself. Such an experiment, a novitiate for marriage, would tend to diminish the evil effects of the sex-spell."

Two people who lived in the house with relatives for a year, without the marriage tie, and the perfect consolidation of interests to unite them, would almost invariably dissolve their engagement and break off their marriage before the expiration of the trial year. The situation would be unnatural. The interference of others and the consciousness of being under espionage, would create false conditions and place both lovers at a disadvantage.

Whatever reforms the Feminists undertake to bring about in the matter of love and marriage, the proposed arrangement will certainly prove to be a miserable failure. Two people might in such a situation become involved in endless quarrels and misunderstandings, while if they were lawfully married and left alone they would get on amiably and with increasing affection and perfect understanding.

If the trial marriage omitted the marriage relation, the experiment would prove nothing at all of the real nature of either, the man or woman; and if it did not omit it, then it would simply complicate our social conditions with legalized social evils.

The Feminists must suggest something better than this, or no reasoning or sensible human being can take them seriously.
